GRANT AND COLFAX.

The Former Introduces the Ex-Vice President to a New York Audience by a Neat Speech.

NEW YORK, April 20.—General Grant, in introducing Colfax last night, who lectured on Lincoln, said: "Ladies and gentlemen: It has been assigned me to present the orator of the evening, who will deliver a lecture on the life and public services of our late martyred President Lincoln. It was not my good fortune to have known that eminent man in early days. Although we hailed from the same state, and were citizens of the same state at the beginning of the great rebellion, yet I never met him until 1864, when I was called east to take command of the army of the Potomac. I had heard very much about Lincoln and all my prejudices were in his favor. I had

HEARD MANY ANECDOTES

Attributed to him which seemed to me rather coarse to come from such a source. After coming to the east I saw a great deal of him. He seemed to love to spend his time with the officers of the army of the Potomac, and was always at my headquarters when [illegible], and I never heard him talk [illegible] about anything that he did not illustrate the strong points he wanted to make by anecdotes always appropriate, always cleanly, always such that might be repeated here, or in any society. It is my firm conviction that many of the anecdotes that are attributed to Lincoln

WERE NEVER UTTERED BY HIM.

All that I ever heard were illustrative of the point he wanted to make clear, and I am told that this was his course at the bar as a lawyer. I shall not repeat any of the anecdotes that were told me for my instruction, but as I came to this evening I was handed a note reminding me of a circumstance that I did not know before, or, if I did, have forgotten, which marks the appropriateness of the date fixed for hearing this lecture. It is very near, only a few days after the anniversary of the death of the great man of whose life and public services you are to hear this evening, and it is also the

CENTENNIAL ANNIVERSARY

Of the announcement by Washington to his army of the recognition by Great Britain of the independence of the colonies. Ladies and gentlemen, I have now offered more remarks than I am in the habit of making on my feet, for I talk best when sitting, and will present to you the orator of the evening, a man who for four years was my colleague, as vice president, while I was in the office of president, the late vice president of the United States, Schuyler Colfax." Applause.

Several papers, notably the Sun, severely criticise Colfax for lecturing upon so good and great a man as Lincoln.

WASHINGTON CITY.

Chief Moses' Complaints Reach Washington.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—About one-half of the recruits mentioned in these dispatches as being now en route for regiments in the Indian country are destined for the department of the Columbia. Restoration to the public domain of part of the reservation occupied by Chief Moses and his band of Washington territory Indians has created much dissatisfaction among the band, and their threatening rumors have reached Washington.

Statue Unveiled.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The statue of the late Prof Henry, first secretary and director of the Smithsonian institute, which had been erected on the Smithsonian grounds, was unveiled to-day with appropriate ceremonies. The exercises began with the rendering of a grand march by the Marine band, during the performance of which the invited guests took places on the platform about the statue.

Brady's Newspaper Experience.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—In the star route trial to-day Brady's newspaper experience was touched upon and the assertion was made that he bought up every second-hand paper that was for sale in Washington, that he rented every paper throughout the country which could be rented, and that he bought up every impecunious correspondent who could be corrupted.

Recruits on the Way.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—One hundred recruits are on their way to strengthen regiments in the departments of California, Arizona and New Mexico, with a view to the possible necessity of an Indian campaign.

The Jury Disagreed.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The Kelly trial concluded to-day. The jury at 6 o'clock retired, and after remaining out for some time returned and announced that they were unable to agree.

Filling a Vacant Chair.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The National Academy of Sciences to-day elected Prof. O. C. Marsh, of Yale College, president to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Prof. Rogers.

STAR ROUTE TRIAL.

Ingersoll Makes a Sneering Reflection upon Brewster's Ability.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—On reassembling the time was occupied by discussion as to what should be the order of argument to the jury.

The court said it would see that a fair decision was had. The court would allow the government to open and close; the court did not know that the government desired more than one closing argument, but had heard that the attorney general might wish to speak.

"I don't know that I would call that argument," said Ingersoll, sneering, "but I object to the precedent. If the attorney-general wishes to say a word in this case let him have the courage to make it an argument where he can be answered, not that I think it would do particular harm. However if he wants to make the closing argument, I should be delighted, but to two closing arguments I object."

Ingersoll insisted that he would refuse to make an address if the government were allowed two closing arguments.

The grand jury then returned the following indictments: One against Wm. Pitt Kellogg for receiving money whilst United States senator for services rendered in relation to a contract with the United States, and one against C. J. Brady for receiving money whilst second assistant postmaster general, for services rendered in relation to a contract with the United States. The indictments are very voluminous, there being five counts in each indictment charging the payment of money unlawfully received.

The court reserved until to-morrow a settlement of the order of argument to the jury and then listened to argument from Davidge, in regard to the statute of limitations affecting certain counts in the indictments charging the existence of conspiracy.

INSPIRATION CAUSES A GIRL TO BURN A CHURCH.

ST. LOUIS, April 20.—[Special.]—Rev. Silas Smith, a colored clergyman of Mexico, Missouri, was arrested in this city yesterday. He had a great deal of trouble with his congregation and other people at Mexico. Some time ago he caused quite a sensation by writing a letter to [illegible] complaining that he was [illegible] who were trying to drive him out of the town. His congregation finally split on the question of dismissing him, and in the midst of the confusion the church was burned. The charge against Mr. Smith is that he incited a girl to burn the church. She has confessed that she lit it, under inspiration that it was her duty to do so, her pastor having advised it. Mexico has had an extraordinary number of incendiary fires within a few months and this [illegible] causes intense excitement. Smith denies everything, and says the girl is crazy.

DEFAULTING BANK PRESIDENT.

BRATTLEBORO, Vt., April 19.—Silas M. Waite, defaulting president and cashier of the Brattleboro national bank, arrived here to-night from the house of correction, accompanied by his counsel. The visit is said to be for the purpose of allowing Waite and his counsel an opportunity to examine the books and records preparatory to arguing [illegible] to an appeal from the judgment [illegible] by the bank against Waite.

Gray's Return—Running Fight with Apache Renegade Killed—Villard's Speech at New Tacoma.

Gray Homeward Bound.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 20.—Gray, defaulting secretary of the harbor commission, is expected to arrive this evening at 9 o'clock. On the arrival of the train at Tracy a city reporter boarded the train and found Gray comfortably installed in a private compartment. A dispatch states that in appearance he is mightily altered. He is a trifle thinner than formerly and his side whiskers that were once a distinguishing feature were shaved. He wears at present only a moustache. Detective Coffey and Mrs. Gray occupied a room with the prisoner and Capt. Lees occupied an adjoining apartment. Gray was in irons and appeared as free as any passenger. He said he had little to say as he did not wish to make any unfortunate admissions that might be used against him in the trial. He said he was confident of entirely clearing himself. He said he would never reveal the secret of his escape, but said:

If they had tried to follow me they would have had a grand old chase for I had a palace foot car.

The Work Goes Steadily On.

[Special.]—A large number of teams and seven cars of horses were transferred during the week from the Colorado division of the Southern Pacific to the scene of operations above Redding, on the line of the California and Oregon railroad. Laborers are being sent forward every day and in the course of the next week the force will be almost doubled. Grading has been commenced in earnest and the superintendent of construction of the Central Pacific is now there with the object of pushing the work as much as possible. Contracts for work have all been awarded, and beyond severe climatic changes there is nothing to impede its progress.

Five Hundred Immigrants.

[Special.]—Over 500 immigrants will arrive from the east to-morrow afternoon, all of whom are provided with tickets to Oregon and Washington territory. John R. Shepard, commissioner for the north, left to-day for Sacramento, where he will board the train and come down with them to this city. Another large colony will arrive on the southern route Tuesday.

Women's Christian Temperance Union.

In course of a few weeks Miss Frances E. Willard is expected to arrive in Portland and organize a Woman's State Temperance Union. Friends of the W. C. T. U. who are willing to entertain delegates to the convention will please notify Mrs. T. A. Stone, Sixth and Mill streets.

Mrs. Willard Makes a Statement.

Mrs. Willard, who lectures this evening, said to a reporter: We have 31 states already organized with 7000 local auxiliaries. We have 28 different lines of work under the following heads: Preventive, educational, evangelistic, social, legal work, and the department of organization. We strive to build up total abstinence and prohibition and to organize success by steady, patient work of years, looking to God in prayer for his blessing on our united efforts.

For Alaskan Business.

Articles of incorporation for the Alaska Salmon Packing & Fur company were filed with the county clerk this afternoon. The objects of incorporation are catching, canning, salting, smoking and otherwise preparing fish for market, trading in hides, furs, provisions and dry goods, dealing in lumber and merchandise at Naha lake and harbor, Alaska, and generally engaging in commercial business. The stock is $1,000,000, divided into 50,000 shares of $20 each. The trustees who subscribe for 100 shares of stock each are as follows: David Wilder, Jas. J. Green, Max Pracht, J. H. Hopkins and F. Bashr.

Personals from San Francisco.

[Special.]—C. H. Lewis returns to Portland by the steamer sailing to-morrow.

James Laidlaw, British vice-consul of Portland, and family arrived from the east this morning.

Eugene Semple has returned from a visit east.

Daniel T. Leahy returns to Portland to-morrow.

Mine Caved In.

NEVADA CITY, April 20.—In the Hawk placer mine at this place a cave occurred yesterday, burying several Chinamen. One was killed and the others more or less injured.

CRUSHED TO DEATH.

Two Men Killed and Twenty Injured by Falling Walls at Sacramento.

SACRAMENTO, April 20.—[Special.]—At a small fire early this morning on K street the roof of an adjoining building fell, burying a number in the ruins. John Hitzenberger, keeper of the saloon which fell, and an unknown man were taken from the ruins dead. The wounded are Wm. Meyers, Herbert Birz, Jas. Lambert, Chas. Evans, Jas. McNulty, D. Bragg, L. A. Lucas, J. Woodbridge, Joseph Reddy, John Higgins, Jno. Sullivan and Geo. Loder. Most of these are badly hurt about the head and back. Several are known to be still in the ruins, but it is believed all the wounded have been recovered.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT OF THE DISASTER.

News was received from Sacramento this morning of a great calamity in which 40 persons were killed and wounded by a falling wall, occasioned by fire breaking out in the kitchen of the Gaupi restaurant on K street. After the fire had been raging a short time the walls of the building fell outward, falling on the roof of a one-story building occupied by Ziegler & Hitzenberger, as a saloon and known as the "Senger Halle," which caused the roof to fall in, carrying everything into the basement. This place has always been a resort for musicians, and a large crowd, including many members of the 1st artillery band, were in the saloon. The number is variously estimated at from 20 to 40.

TAKING OUT THE DEAD AND WOUNDED.

The fire department responded promptly to the alarm of fire, and after extinguishing the flames turned their attention to extricating the killed and injured. Those who were standing near to the wall on either side were removed with but little difficulty. Some 15 or 18 were taken out in this way more or less injured. Near the center of the building the debris fell clear to the ground, and from here the first dead body, that of John Hitzenberger, one of the proprietors of the saloon, was taken. The second body removed was that of an elderly man about 40 years of age, respectably dressed. His head and face were crushed so that he could not be recognized. He had short chin whiskers and mustache, both grey. On the body was found a gold watch and chain.

LIST OF THE VICTIMS.

Later telegrams give the names of the following who have been taken from the ruins: John Hitzenberger, dead; Louis Lucas, back injured; Herman Blitz, scalp wounds; James Lambert, head cut badly; Charles Evans, scalp wounds; Leo Hartard, head and face cut; Fred Ridder, internal injuries; Frank Bragg, [illegible]; Wm. Geyens, cut on head and face; Charles F. Davis, bruised on legs and body; Joseph McAllister, scalp wound; J. Woodbridge, left arm and face injured; J. J. Sullivan, head cut; Joseph Higgins, ankle sprained and head gashed; John Higgins, cut on head; George Loder, [illegible] and face bruised.

CLEARING AWAY THE DEBRIS.

SACRAMENTO, April 20.—At an early hour this morning fire in a three story building on K street, between Fifth and Sixth, caused a falling wall to crush through a saloon. Several persons were hurt. John Hitzenberger, who is one of the proprietors, and an unknown man were killed. It was reported that many others were buried, but none were found. The debris is being removed now.

THE RUSH OF IMMIGRANTS.

From the Rock Bound Shores of New England and from the Cyclone Swept States of the Interior, They Come to the Northwest.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 20.—[Special.]—The steamship [illegible] sailed this afternoon for Victoria and Puget sound, carrying full freight and passenger list. Fully three hours before the time announced for sailing the ticket office was besieged by an anxious crowd of immigrants who endeavored to obtain passage and were obliged to wait for the next steamer. At the wharf over [illegible] were refused admission to the vessel. The steerage was crowded by men, women and children, and all, with the exception of a colony of [illegible] who intend settling in British Columbia on the line of the Canadian Pacific, will TUCSON, April 20.—Streeter, reported [illegible] killed at the head of an Apache and [illegible] Mexican troops near Tres Bravos Monday last, was quartermaster's clerk at San Carlos during Gov. Safford's administration in Arizona. He was suspected of carrying [illegible] and joined the Indians and was watched. He managed to escape and joined Juh and Geronimo in Chihuahua. Gov. Safford offered a large reward for his capture but did not get him. He has been in Mexico ever since and has been arrested several times by the Mexican authorities on suspicion of giving aid to the Apaches, his last arrest occurring at [illegible] a few weeks since, when he was discharged for want of evidence. He speaks the Apache dialect fluently, is intelligent and educated, and is known by the Apaches and Mexicans as Don [illegible]. Chief Geronimo's oldest boy was named for him.

Chief Moses to be Forced Back.

WALLA WALLA, April 20.—[Special.]—Captain McGregor with troop A and Lieut. Backus, troop L, fully equipped, left at 9:30 this forenoon to establish a military post at the mouth of Foster creek near the mouth of the Okanagan river. Knowing ones here believe that Moses is to be forced back on to his reservation and that posts will be established in anticipation of an outbreak by his tribe. The expedition is under command of Captain Thos. McGregor, an old Indian fighter.

Port Townsend Passengers.

PORT TOWNSEND, April 20.—[Special.]—List of passengers leaving here by the Eider, this morning, for San Francisco: Mrs. P. L. Brown, M. Schrader, Miss D. E. Crowley, A. D. Warner, M. Hill, Mrs. B. C. Olmstock, S. H. Schilling and wife, Mrs. M. E. Billings, H. A. Harvey, J. Armstrong and wife, Mrs. M. Nein, J. H. Kent, J. King and wife, A. King, J. P. B. Rosabach, G. Kellogg, H. E. Coonick, Jas. Seattle Notes.

SEATTLE, April 20.—[Special.]—The butcher shop of Chas. K. Anderson was burglarized last night, the safe cracked and $126 taken therefrom.

Since the 1st of April 1300 passengers from San Francisco have been landed in this city.

IDAHO.

A Deputy Sheriff Murdered.

BOISE CITY, April 20.—[Special.]—Walter Coffin was shot and probably killed yesterday by a man named J. T. Ostner in the Payette valley. Coffin joined the Sheriff of Union, Oregon, O. P. Goodale, in pursuit of Ostner, who helped to commit a double murder recently in that county. Coffin was shot under the eye at a short distance, the ball ranged up through the head and he was unconscious from the first. Parties have gone to bring him in. Ostner escaped, but may be captured.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

News in General from Victoria.

VICTORIA, April 20.—[Special.]—All four of the wrecked vessels condemned will be sold at public auction next week.

The George W. Elder sailed to-day.

In every quarter of the city is heard the sound of the trowel, hammer and saw. Buildings of an improved class are going up in all directions. Tenement houses are in large demand, as evinced by their speedy rental. Competent and sober mechanics have no difficulty in finding employment at good wages.

The steamship Wilmington arrived at last night from San Francisco.

Arrived, the ship Invincible, Captain Strickland, from Hongkong via Bolivia. She left Hongkong on the 18th of December, and was blown off to Bolivia. During the tedious passage the captain's wife died. The ship brings a general cargo of Chinese merchandise.

THE CLAIMS OF THE INDIANS.

FORT SIMCOE, April 18, 1883.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

I have read with great interest the dispatches that from time to time have appeared in your columns relative to the Indian scare in the Columbia river, and have waited patiently to hear the "other side of the story." At present "Lo" seems to have all his own way and no voice is lifted in behalf of the settlers. Though not particularly cognizant of the facts in this particular case, yet as no abler defender has appeared, I ask the privilege of a few words for the white settlers.

And first, these Columbia river Indians possess—fully secured to them—the finest body of land from Mexico to British Columbia, and between the Rocky and Cascade mountains.

The Yakima reservation belongs to them and to their children. No white settler can disturb them there, and there is more than land enough of the finest quality, not only for the Indians already there, but for all who were parties to the treaty.

This reservation was selected by the Indians themselves, its boundaries defined, and they voluntarily relinquished all right to homes outside of it. It is true they reserved the right to fish, to hunt, and dig roots beyond the bounds of the reservation, but never asked any right of residence, with the sole exception of the Palouse Indians, who stipulated for the privilege of living at their old homes till the government should value and pay for the improvements they had there made.

With the above noted exception the surrender of all country outside the reservation was complete and final. As compensation for this surrender the Indians have received hundreds of thousands of dollars, all drawn from the pockets of these same "poor white settlers," as one journal calls them. Now in the name of justice I ask, can any fair minded man see anything unreasonable in the demand of the settlers that the Indians be required to fulfill their bargain, for which they have been paid, and go to the reservation.

As for the statement said to have been made by some officer from Fort Walla Walla that the settlers were alone to blame and that the lamb-like Indians were imposed on [illegible], every old settler in Oregon knows better.

Any man who knows anything of Indians knows that it would be [illegible]

THE CONSPIRATORS.

Norman Turns Informer—An Errand Boy's Confession.

LONDON, April 20.—Norman, Dalton, Wilson, Dr. Gallagher, Bernard Gallagher, Curtin, Ansburgh and Whitehead, [illegible] charged with being concerned in a dynamite conspiracy, were again brought up in the Bow street police court this morning. On the prisoners being arraigned in the court [illegible] it was announced that Norman had turned informer and the rest of the prisoners, including Bernard Gallagher and Whitehead, were to be formally tried for treason and felony. Norman testified that his real name was William Joseph, that he was born of Irish parents in New York.

A detective belonging to Birmingham was sworn and corroborated the testimony given by other witnesses as to the time of Wilson's arrival at the house of Whitehead.

Coleman and other witnesses confirmed the account given by Lynch of his movements while he was in Birmingham.

The coat worn by Whitehead at the time of his arrest bore the tailor's mark, Brooks Bros., Broadway, New York. The crown also produced a letter signed by Whitehead.

A rubber maker who has a place of business near the Charing Cross hotel was sworn, and identified Gallagher as the customer.

After other witnesses had given testimony the prisoners were remanded to further hearing on Thursday next.

ANOTHER REPORT.

LONDON, April 20.—The men arrested for connection with the dynamite conspiracy were again brought up this morning for further hearing. The court-room was crowded. Among those present was Herbert Gladstone. The boy who was employed by Whitehead at Birmingham and who yesterday was identified by Lynch was placed in the witness box and recognized Gallagher as the man who had visited Whitehead. The boy testified that Gallagher, when he visited Whitehead, gave the name of "Fletcher." When he called to see Whitehead he sent him (the boy) on an errand, and told him he need not hurry back.

When he returned Whitehead and Gallagher were still engaged in conversation, and Whitehead gave him a holiday. Wilson, another of the prisoners, arrived in a cab. He said he had come for the [illegible] that "Fletcher" had ordered. Wilson was ushered by Whitehead to an inner room. The next time Lynch came to Whitehead's place he brought with him a large box. The boy was unable to swear as to the identity of Wilson. He was, however, positive as to Gallagher, who, he said, called several times to see Whitehead.

ENGLAND.

IMMIGRANTS FOR MANITOBA.

LIVERPOOL, April 20.—About 800 immigrants sailed to-day for Canada, most of whom are bound for Manitoba. It is estimated they take away capital to the amount of $400,000.

PHOENIX PARK MURDER TRIAL.

DUBLIN, April 20.—The trial of Timothy Kelly for complicity in the murder of Cavendish and Burke was resumed this morning. After calling a few more witnesses the crown announced their case closed.

Eugene Kingston, arrested at Liverpool Wednesday and charged with being connected with the Phoenix park murders, was arraigned to-day and after a hearing was remanded to answer the charge of conspiracy to murder.

SPANISH STEAMER SUNK.

Quebec Parliament House Burned.

The following scrap came by telegraph at a late hour. It is evidently the concluding lines of a dispatch which has stuck somewhere on the wires, though it appears, however, to indicate that the provincial parliament house has been destroyed by fire.

When first discovered half the structure was in flames. The firemen were quick in getting at work, but the flames had the mastery and soon were bursting from every window in the main block. The whole city was lit up, and thousands of people thronged the streets. Cavalry, drilling at the time, and a battery from the citadel marched to the scene and saved, perhaps, half of the library. The west wing, containing the common rooms, alone was saved, but much damaged. All the walls were burnt, but a portion are standing. Insured. A new stone parliament house is to be erected, contracts for which were given out four weeks ago. The government pays in perpetuity, however, to the archbishop ground rent of $4000 annually.

WHAT THE PRESS SAYS.

The Dynamite Plotters are from America, and Laws Should be Passed Against Them.

NEW YORK, April 20.—[Special.]—The Tribune says on yesterday's disclosures in Dublin: "These plots were formed in New York. The money was raised here, the agents selected and sent out to do their work of destruction, and they were not Irish refugees, but Americans. These are facts which the United States government will have to face. If there is no law, local, state or national, under which these crimes can be punished the time has come for its enactment. Governments of christendom will be forced for mutual protection to discriminate between political offenses and dynamite crimes."

ENEMIES OF MANKIND.

The Star, Kelly's organ, is the only other morning paper equally outspoken. It says: "The men who plot the use of dynamite for such destruction and slaughter are enemies of mankind, and are dangerous to be suffered to go at large. There is no law in this state to punish such conspiracies, but there ought to be one of the most stringent character." The World, and two or three others, seem disposed to discredit Lynch's testimony, notwithstanding much of it was corroborated in interviews and local reports printed this morning.

The Star says its reporter was denied admission to Dr. Gallagher's house last evening. The house stands on the corner in [illegible] and in the [illegible], as well as in front, stood a number of men, which led to the belief that the place is surrounded by a guard.

DYNAMITE IRELAND'S GREATEST FRIEND.

The Sun prints a report of an enthusiastic meeting at Jersey City last evening, under the auspices of the prisoners' [illegible] aid fund society, at which a [illegible] was adopted with enthusiasm [illegible] that "this meeting hereby indorses the action of the advanced party in Ireland and the invincibles as the only [illegible] of action that will ever win freedom for Ireland, and that we regard dynamite as the greatest contribution made by science to the masses, as it places in their hands an instrument against which the power of governments is powerless." One of the speakers said the cause of the evil of Ireland is [illegible] landlords, and landlordism must go down not only in Ireland but the world over.

THE COLUMBIA RIVER AS A PLACE OF SHIPMENT.

ST. HELENS, April 20, 1883.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

It was suggested in your editorial columns a few days ago, in an article urging improvement of the Columbia and Willamette rivers between this point and Portland, that the loading of vessels at Puget sound or on the Columbia river below the St. Helens bar would work serious injury to your city. So far as this remark applies to the sound, none, perhaps, will gainsay it; but to me and to others it appears that as it applies to the Columbia river the conclusion is not justified. Certainly the shipment of [illegible] the Columbia river is a means [illegible] which the prosperity of Portland is assured, and whether the grain is actually put on shipboard from a Portland wharf or on the Columbia river below the bar is a matter of small consequence. The real contest which you foreshadow is between the Columbia river and the sound, and supremacy for the former is supremacy for Portland.

We have learned by experience that vessels of deepest draft cannot take full cargo at Portland [illegible]

VILLARD AT TACOMA.

He Speaks for an Hour and Answers Several Questions.

NEW TACOMA, April 20.—[Special.]—Alpha opera house was packed to see and hear Henry Villard. The hall was full for [illegible] minutes [illegible] announced that Mr. Villard had been requested to answer as to the building by his company of a depot hotel and elevators in this city. Mr. Villard was then introduced and spoke over an hour on the progress of the city since his first visit here, some six months ago, and the RAPID GROWTH OF THE WHOLE NORTHWEST.

The transcontinental road would be sufficiently completed, he believed, by the 1st of August to be traveled over, and he would assure us of its completion by the last of August. He dwelt upon the [illegible] of parties who had financially embarrassed [illegible], but the danger was now passed. The needs of the city of Tacoma to make it prosperous would not be withheld. The depot and hotel were necessities which would be supplied. In this connection he paid a glowing compliment to O. B. Wright, agent of the Tacoma land company. As to the construction of elevators [illegible] a system, but as used were our farmers to sowing grain that [illegible]

[illegible]

And while they were being educated to its use facilities for shipping grain would be at once supplied.

Mr. Villard offered then to answer any other questions, when Mr. Burns inquired as to the probable building of the Cascade branch.

Mr. Villard said a good pass had been found last October, and yet a better one lately, but the delay was due to the great desideratum, which was to finish the main line. Had the company been hampered during the past year by a contract to grade or build the Cascade road, the result must have been attended with great difficulty and embarrassment.

Mr. Villard was frequently applauded during his speech, which gave hearty satisfaction to all.

Mr. Villard at Seattle.

SEATTLE, April 20.—Henry Villard, president of the Northern Pacific railroad company, and the party accompanying him arrived in this city last evening, and were given a very friendly reception, to which they responded in a cordial manner. Mr. Villard to-day visited the territorial university here, of which he is a substantial benefactor, and declared his intention to continue his assistance to that institution. He drove over the town and back to the lakes, and asserted that at no other place on the Pacific coast with which he was acquainted had there been such rapid growth since his previous visit in October, 1881. At a meeting of leading citizens to-day, Mr. Villard accepted for the corporations represented by him the sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars from the people as an inducement to build a line of railroad into the Cedar and Green river valley, from fifteen to thirty miles long, tapping a region rich in coal, timber and farm lands. He stated that he will come again with the first train from New York over the completed line of the Northern Pacific, in September next, when he expects to ride in his own car into this city.

ALBANY NOTES.

SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL [illegible] 1883

SALMON

Any prediction in relation to the salmon [illegible] would be as uncertain as a guess [illegible] the weather of the day [illegible]. There are absolutely no signs which [illegible] upon and whether [illegible] light is one of the things [illegible] find out. The [illegible] this fall will [illegible] by the amount of the season's pack [illegible] cannot be even estimated [illegible] tion as to the future market must [illegible] less at random. But one thing may be stated as certain, that if the pack this season [illegible] be large the price of the product will be low. The outlook for the packers is bad in either event. A prosperous season on the river means a bad season in the markets and the only hope for good prices is [illegible] of product. For two years the [illegible] market has been [illegible] in the interest of [illegible] ers and while they [illegible] were buying at high prices have found it difficult to get a new dollar for an old one, and foreign purchasers are considering about to reduce losses to a minimum and get rid of the big stocks hidden away in English warehouses. To this date there has been very [illegible] ness done for future delivery against [illegible] transactions early last year. The American Grocer, New York, writing of salmon, says that the business of packing has been overdone, and that still its extension is being pushed in British Columbia, in Alaska and slightly on the Columbia and Sacramento rivers. Among the large new projects is one that intends purchasing one of the old Pacific Mail steamers with a view of running it to Alaskan waters and converting it into a salmon cannery. The scheme is likely to be carried out next year. This has been done before on a small scale. In Alaska the Indians furnish twenty-five salmon of an average weight of eight to ten pounds for one dollar. This year on the Columbia, the fishermen are bold and positive in their demand for 90 cents for fish. This move on their part has been a leading factor in checking sales on contract. In Japan salmon packing is being carried on. During this week offers have been invited from buyers here for a block of nearly 11,000 cases packed in that island. The heavy stock of salmon in England, largely composed of Fraser river fish, is a dead weight on the market for new pack. Present holders will have to realize, and hence we find a very weak market in the United Kingdom. Purchases of first-class Columbia river brands on contract cannot be made as low as similar brands can now be laid down in New York via England. The lay-down cost of prime brands, offered in London at 23s 6d, is $1 52½ in New York, duty paid, the rate being 35 per cent. upon the [illegible] cases as a manufactured article, with [illegible] the fish. If the market in England [illegible] dull it is probable prices can be shaded so as to permit of first class brands being landed at New York as low as $1 50.

The world's product of canned salmon has increased remarkably year by year. Accurate figures of last year's pack are not available, but it will not fall below 1,100,000 cases, comparing with previous years as follows:

	Cases.		Cases.
1882	1,100,000	1879	598,000
1881	900,000	1878	636,500
1880	660,000	1877	604,783

During the past six years the United Kingdom imported as follows:

	Cases.		Cases.
1882	535,038	1879	264,039
1881	542,462	1878	317,984
1880	[illegible]	1877	265,419

For the four years prior to 1881 the United Kingdom absorbed an average of 311,148 cases. For the past two years it has received 1,077,500 cases, or 538,750 cases annually, being 227,602 cases above the average of the preceding four years. Does anyone familiar with the condition of the manufacturing and agricultural interests of Great Britain imagine that there was any such increase in consumption? In 1880 the average price of salmon was 21s per case, rising before the close of the year to 23s, and steadily advancing, until the average cost in 1882 was [illegible] per case. And yet, in the face of a higher cost and huge supplies, an attempt is made to make packers and dealers on this side believe the consumption has increased nearly 75 per cent. The stocks found for sale, and the declining market in England afford no encouragement to the usual heavy buyers on either foreign or home account, to purchase on contract. Hence the holding off.

If prices should drop, the Grocer thinks that [illegible] buyers would make contracts at once. If opening prices were $1 25 on the river, it would induce buying, and the lower the figures the greater would be the demand. The market in the eastern states is in a first-rate condition to invite business when prices are low. Stocks are light there, if we except a block of 7000 to 10,000 cases held by one firm at New York city. New York dealers are all disposed to buy, but prices must be lower than last year, when they ranged from $1 60 to $1 75 in New York, and even then the trade was slow, as jobbers knew there was a very small profit at such figures and no chance for an advance.

Under all these circumstances, cannery men feel that unless the fishermen recede in their demands and the English market is relieved in some miraculous way, that the packing this season will put the salmon market in the same demoralized condition it was in a few years ago.

ARGUMENTS FOR IT

Taking for its text the license ordinance of this city, the Helena (Montana) Herald says: "High license will furnish the means to pay criminal costs and support poor houses and lunatic asylums which intemperance does so much to fill. High license will make the cost of liquor dear, and we consider it a kindness to give a drinker little rather than much for his money. If the cost of drink were made four times as much as it is and the quality of the liquor improved in the same proportion it would be the best temperance reformation the country has ever seen. If license is made high those who pay the high price will watch that the others do not sell, and thus some of the worst places will be closed. Some will say that the poor man should have his poor whisky as well as the richer one his more costly beverage, but we think the poor man will fare the best under the arrangement. If he gets better liquor that will be a gain; if he gets less of it that will be another; and if he gets economical and says he can not afford to drink, it will be the greatest gain of all. In every way, therefore, the argument sustains the new regulation."

It may not be possible in every city to sustain an ordinance like that which we have here, and in some places such ordinance can not be enacted. But still there is a way. The issue in the recent election in Chicago was high license, and it was defeated by the voting rabble by more than 10,000 majority. A special to the New York Times says: "This is probably the last campaign which will be run by the Chicago republicans on [illegible] and [illegible] form." This spiteful expression is the result of deep disappointment [illegible] perhaps [illegible] part defeat, but [illegible] closed that the slums of a great city and universal suffrage can control [illegible]. But there are others who do not despair. Having learned that it is not wise to [illegible] govern a city through the votes of the classes [illegible] enemies of government, they have gone to the legislature of the state to get a high license law which the voting rumholes of the city can not repeal. A bill for such law has been passed by one branch of the legislature and it is believed will be passed by the other.

The friends of the new license and bond ordinance of this city [illegible] not conceal from themselves the danger that through [illegible] of affairs it may be [illegible]. But [illegible] lature for [illegible]

ANOTHER [illegible]

[illegible] the news which was really [illegible] the Western associated press [illegible] journalistic [illegible] how plain [illegible]

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH OFFICE, Portland, Or., April [illegible] 1883.

THE OREGONIAN Publishing Company: In reply to your communication of this date I have to say that the items [illegible] which the headlines are given below were received as special [illegible]. They were delayed in transmission on account of trouble on the wires, and under ordinary conditions would have been received in time for publication in THE OREGONIAN of the 19th inst. As they were received so late [illegible] your paper [illegible] obliged to charge the [illegible] at the usual special rates although [illegible] the same items were subsequently received in the Western associated press report.

I give below as your request a memorandum of the time each item was received here as special to THE OREGONIAN and by the Western associated press report:

Philadelphia Item— Patti's Threatening Letter, received as special to OREGONIAN [illegible] A. M. April 18. Received as Western Associated Press report 11 36 A. M. April 19.

New York Item— Dinner to Retiring Wool Merchants, received as special to OREGONIAN 6 21 P. M. April 18. Received as Western Associated Press report, 12 20 A. M. April 19.

Washington D. C. Item— Langtry Lily in Washington, received as special to OREGONIAN [illegible] P. M. April 18. Received as Western associated press report 12 midnight April 19.

London Item— In event of Anam Affair Involving France, etc., received as special to OREGONIAN 7 50 P. M. April 18. Received as Western associated press report 10 40 P. M. April 18.

Yours truly, F. H. LAMB,
Ass't Superintendent.

THE OREGONIAN having now proven that it correctly designated the items referred to as its own specials, may properly add an explanation of the circumstance of their repetition by the Western associated press. This journal is a member of two news associations. One of them is the Western associated press, which began April 1 to furnish a report to journals on this coast, the other is the California associated press, of which this paper has been a member during many years. In addition it has specials from its own correspondent in San Francisco and from all principal points in the northwest. Of course all its eastern news comes through San Francisco. Sometimes the same piece of news is sent by both associations. To illustrate by other instances, on Thursday THE OREGONIAN published a special which gave an account of a spat between Gov. Butler of Massachusetts and counsel employed in the Tewksbury investigation. The same subsequently came in the common report, and appeared in the free whisky organ on Friday morning. Again the full report of the recent disaster to shipping in British Columbia, which was printed on Wednesday morning, was a special to the California associated press. A copy was dropped here for THE OREGONIAN on Tuesday morning, but too late for the paper of that day. Tuesday night it was telegraphed back from San Francisco by the Western associated press. Accident, therefore, gave out special to the free whisky organ. Otherwise it would not have had the report at all.

It is proper to say, however, that delivery of the same news by the two associations is unusual. It happens only in the case of a comparatively small number of items. Therefore the great body of special news presented by this paper appears in no other journal of the northwest, and our special report often exceeds the volume of the general one. The transmission of an occasional item in both reports requires us to pay for telegraphing both, and is of course a cause of some loss; but this journal does not allow that incident to stand in the way of its determination to furnish all the news. To do this it must have access to all sources from which news can be obtained. No other paper in the northwest receives the report of the California associated press, and therefore THE OREGONIAN, being also a member of that association, designates the dispatches it receives through that association as special. But it never so designates any dispatch unless so received and paid for by it. In its dealings with its readers it is an inflexible principle to avoid misleading statements and all forms of duplicity or deception; first, because it is right, and second, because no journal can prosper in any other way.

But the free whisky organ takes the other course. Daily it prints as "special" a mass of matter which never comes to it by wire. Every newspaper man detects at once every one of these fraudulent "dispatches," which are either clipped entire from eastern papers or re-written here in the hope of disguising them. For example, the "special" in yesterday's hoodlum organ headed "The Coming Tide—Immigration Pouring into the Northwest by thousands," is the substance, and in many parts the very words, of articles that appeared in the St. Paul and Minneapolis papers about two weeks ago. The pretended interview with the chief of the bureau of statistics at Washington about "The Hog," some days further back, was made up out of a copy of the report of that bureau printed some months ago; and so on. These paltry devices deceive nobody except those who having eyes to see see not.

They who have been long acquainted with THE OREGONIAN—even its enemies—long since learned the futility of attempting to impugn its statements of facts or the integrity of its news. On these points it has taught everybody who has assailed it lessons which they remember. Perhaps the organ of hoodlumism and free whisky will in time learn as much on this point as some others have, if it be not too stupid and survive long enough.

The low class of wholesale dealers who back the retail venders of the bowel scorching aqua fortis dispensed in the unlicensed drinking holes of the city complain that enforcement of the new ordinance is unjust because it is impossible, first, for so many to pay the license and second, for so many to give the bond. That is just what was anticipated and desired. To furnish security for all the saloons, they say, would require 830 bondsmen, and it is out of the question to find so many persons with the qualifications required who would go on the bonds. Undoubtedly. Good citizens expect to get rid of at least half the saloons of the city, including all the vile dens, by this ordinance. That is just what it is intended to accomplish.

The backbone of the law is liquor [illegible] of Portland [illegible] of [illegible] and wholesale dealers [illegible] the trade [illegible] [illegible] from [illegible]

[illegible] is now [illegible] Helena [illegible] Northwestern [illegible] 60 miles of Missoula [illegible] other points by the middle of June [illegible] Helena and Missoula the distance [illegible] At this time the track [illegible] laid less than 230 miles. It ought to be completed without difficulty before the end of September.

A correspondent at St. Helens, whose letter we print this morning, thinks THE OREGONIAN [illegible] As between the Columbia [illegible] and Portland [illegible] common [illegible] of the great export business will [illegible] the advantages of having [illegible] at our own docks are too important to lose sight of, and we must invite the spirit of our merchants in this as in other points to [illegible]. In shipping from so near a point as Columbia City it is true Portland would retain the local trade of the shipping, which after a while will be a great business of itself, but in letting its business go even so far from home it is in danger of letting it go on to the Sound. We must load our ships at our own docks.

PLEA FOR BETTER ROADS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

The point of question I wish to ask through your paper is this: Is there no way in which the public can reach the county judge and commissioners so that we can get some work done on the roads east of the Willamette river? I was a member of a cortege to Lone Fir cemetery two weeks ago and since that date I have often thought if I should die I would rather adopt the modern cremation mode than have my poor old bones shaken to pieces over that so-called county road.

Now I am no chechaco in Oregon. I helped eat the first ox that was barbecued for the occasion of the laying the first plank and driving the first spike to lay the first plank road to Hillsboro, in which I took an active part and worked with a good will. Next came the scheme for a line of ocean steamers to ply between Portland and San Francisco which was easily found in the Gold Hunter. Perhaps some of your readers remember the time as also the scheme.

Now it is good roads we want. We east siders ought to be entitled to have some of the county money expended on this side of the river. I don't blame Mr. C. P. Bacon or any other man for wanting a good road to his farm. If I had the money that had been lavished on the canyon road since Lou Stark was supervisor I think I could pave the same with trade dollars. All that I ask is for the county fathers to bear in mind that we east siders are a portion of Multnomah county's tax payers, and we pay our tax as regularly as the never-failing collector calls on us—as the sun rises in the east. I presume that the west siders imagine that our mind all dries up before that orb crosses the Willamette. Had that sun to cross the ferry and wait for boats as long as other sons are compelled to, this, no doubt, would be the case. But as that sun crosses on a free bridge we simply say why cannot we? If any one should ask who this old pioneer is that ate the ox and drove the spike tell them it is not Captain Ankeny, the most enterprising man in the state, but merely a 49 webfooter styled

Views of Crater Lake.—[illegible] the well known artist, who some time since visited Southern Oregon and made sketches of many of the most interesting points in the beautiful scenery for which that section is noted, has just completed two paintings representing glimpses of Crater Lake. This singular and picturesque sheet of water, which is one of the wonders of that section, is situated on the summit of the Cascade range, between Jackson and Klamath counties, the surface being [illegible] feet above the [illegible]. It is surrounded by a rim of rocks varying from [illegible] to 1800 feet. One of the pictures shows a view of the lake through a narrow [illegible] in the rim of rocks. The deep green hue of the water lying far below is in striking contrast with the barren and rugged rocks which form the [illegible], their towering summits reaching [illegible], the clouds bearing a few scraggy pines, while to the [illegible] far shore of the lake. Every [illegible] is wrought in a careful and painstaking manner, and the drawing and coloring does full [justice] to the great natural beauty of the [scene]. The same picture represents a [illegible] looking east, with Mount Scott [illegible]. The point of view chosen is near a [illegible] overhanging crag, in the shadow of which [illegible] of those singular pinnacles of rock common to the locality. Far beneath spreads the deep [illegible] of the lake, while beyond rise the rugged [illegible] of the farther shore. The rich and varied [illegible] of the rocks give the artist an opportunity [illegible] some fine effects, of which full advantage is taken. In a few years, when the railroad [illegible] through to California, this lake, which [illegible] miles from the nearest settlement, will be [illegible] by many. The erection of a hotel in the [illegible] elevator to enable tourists to [illegible] the lake with ease, is already under contemplation.

[illegible] Law upon the Subject.—The recent fatal [illegible], which killed one man and seriously scalded two others, has had another effect equally startling. It has shown that in the [illegible] law, as laid down in the statute books, [illegible] committed by running upon land a defective engine, or a boiler so worn-out with [illegible] known to every one as dangerous [illegible]. So great a feeling was aroused [illegible] coloring class, many of whom are [illegible] about other equally rotten boilers, [illegible] was requested to take official [illegible] Engineer Ghaen's death and fix the [illegible] which caused it where it belonged. [illegible] replied that he knew of nothing [illegible] governing his office which authorized [illegible] such an investigation, but [illegible] should be done, took counsel with [illegible] of the county court. The result was [illegible] ideas. There is no [illegible] the matter. Had the explosion [illegible], however small, some one [illegible] responsible. Or had Ghaen been [illegible] instead of lingering several hours [illegible] care, there might have been a [illegible] investigation. The law [illegible] of a murder, that no investigation [illegible] unless a person is found dead, [illegible] in case of an accident [illegible] of a coroner's inquest. Those [illegible] and work about rotten boilers [illegible] in order to obtain [illegible] and little ones, must take their [illegible]. If they are killed no one [illegible] their murder.

THE HIGHER EDUCATION OF WOMEN.

Interesting Lecture by Miss Helen F. Spalding at Unitarian Chapel.

It is impossible to do justice to the lecture of Miss Spalding in an abstract, being itself a condensation of what might well have been expanded into several lectures. At the outset she went to the center of her theme, and might furnish a hint to many more experienced lecturers, in the directness with which everything was said, and the avoidance of desultoriness. Briefly referring to the long past, when it was assumed that nature had [illegible] for a woman to know books, or have an education, and nothing was left to her but aspiration and appeal, when treated as an inferior, women were helped to be inferior, the lecturer rapidly reviewed the history of the modern era, for the higher education of women, dating in this country about 50 years ago and passing through the anti-slavery contest, the life and work of Horace Mann, and recent advances in England and on the continent, until the leading universities of the world now give equal advantages to both sexes. The standing arguments against the higher education of women were then admirably reviewed, and answered so epigrammatically that it is difficult to select or leave out, without injustice to some part of the theme. These standing arguments are

1. Mental inferiority, to which it was answered, "What wonder if centuries of cultivation, for men, and enforced neglect mentally for women, led to a partial superiority, at least, in the aggregate."

2. The experience of the past; but one glow of aspiration answers the whole record of the past; because of that past, or of any record in it, will you place bars against the doing of that which you allege cannot be done? Why not at least admit the experiment and give woman a chance to fail if that is what is predestined?

3. Physical inferiority: to which the answer is the actual experience, in the last half century, of teachers in institutions where there has been co-education. Brain work, if well directed, is healthy. The schools have been most carelessly charged with ill-health, which, in the majority of cases, is proved by statistics, was produced by social excess, or home neglects.

Referring to the recent protests of Dr. Morgan Dix against the present time and the present status of womankind, the lecturer pertinently asked, "Which of the past ages he prefers, since this is deemed so recreant?" At one point of the lecture, the satire was most impressive, when it was said, "You in one breath despise woman for screaming at a mouse, yet force her into frivolities by denying her mind and helping her to forget herself in a purpose." The man who waxes eloquent over the differing mind of woman, goes home to dinner and divides the same food with his children of either sex. If there are such differences, must they not hold for digestion as well as intellect?

Finally it was eloquently claimed and proved by many examples, 1—That women have acquired education and developed the highest results through it. 2.—That all that ennobles womanhood is left and made infinitely nobler by culture, unfolding her nature, giving her equal opportunities with husband and brother. Home is never more home than when its founders have brought to the sacred companionship all that is meant by an educated mind, conscience and heart.

The audience room was completely filled and the wish expressed by every one that the lecture be published as a pamphlet. It certainly deserves an audience of thousands.

BRIEF MENTION.

Minstrel matinee to-day.

The State of California arrived here at 6 P. M. yesterday.

Frank Dekum has sold the old buildings on the corner of Third and Washington streets for $25.

Messages at the Western Union office for J. M. Abbott, R. G. Mudge, Joseph Kerkley and George F. Wall.

Thomas Finnerty, convicted of larceny, was denied a new trial yesterday in the state circuit court and sentenced to the penitentiary for one year.

Portland Band of Hope No. 1 will meet this afternoon, in Y. M. C. A. hall, at two o'clock. Children, with their parents and friends, are urged to be present.

Martha Washington camp No. 1, Daughters of Liberty, have their monthly social to-night. There will be a good turn out, as their socials are always largely attended and are very enjoyable affairs.

A bill of sale was filed yesterday in the county clerk's office, transferring the furniture of C. A. Altsky in the house on Taylor street between East and West Park, to F. Alex. Meyer. The purchase price was $2000.

Frank Hacheny has begun suit in the state circuit court against L. W. Morgan, and a writ of attachment was issued yesterday, placing the sheriff in charge of the latter's nursery farm at the old Ellis place, situate on the Milwaukie road.

Charles Howard and John Dixon, convicted of robbery and larceny respectively, take life easy behind the bars at the county jail, awaiting sentence from Judge Stott which shall tell how long the penitentiary gates will close upon them.

The trial of the 21 Chinamen indicted for gambling, was begun yesterday before Judge Stott and a jury in the state circuit court. The whole day was occupied in the taking of testimony on the part of the prosecution, and this was not finished when the court adjourned.

The lecture given by J. R. Phillips upon "The causes of the war of the rebellion" under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic, at Red Men's hall, last evening, for the benefit of Burnside camp No. 1, Sons of Veterans, was well attended, and was exceedingly instructive as well as interesting.

THE FREE WHISKY CASES.

All the Arrested Bar Keepers Arraigned—More Dilatory Proceedings.

The police court was densely thronged yesterday, it being understood that the cases of the saloon keepers arrested for selling liquor without license were coming up for trial. The other business before the court was trifling and soon disposed of. In fact ever since the work of arresting saloon keepers was commenced there has been a very perceptible decrease in the number of drunks brought up before the police judge. When the cases of the unlicensed saloon keepers were reached the dock was clear of the [illegible] and [illegible] by them and a number of the whisky men themselves had seats therein, and seemed to [illegible] this was not the first appearance in a dock.

Drake & Stearns, the counsel [illegible] consideration of the matter be postponed until the legality of the ordinance be settled.

Richard Williams, of counsel for the city, suggested that the better plan would be for the saloons to [illegible] until the matter could be settled.

Counsel for defense replied that the unlicensed saloon keepers did not intend to close their establishments. He suggested that they be allowed to give bonds sufficient to cover the license and the costs of prosecution, and be allowed to carry on their business till the legality of the ordinance could be tested.

Mr. Williams blandly suggested that the saloon keepers pay their license under protest, and then they would have a legal right to carry on their business, and if the ordinance was found to be illegal they could get their money back.

Mr. Drake said it was his opinion that the money would be all disbursed in three days after it was paid into the city treasury.

Mr. Williams stated that no compromise would be made, and insisted that the unprofitable argument be brought to a close, and the trials proceed with.

Jacob Schwartz was called, and walked up like a lamb to the slaughter, when it was found that the witnesses in his case were not present, so it was continued.

William Wallace was then arraigned, but when City Attorney Kincaid came to read over the complaint it was found that the word "sell" had been omitted from it. He asked permission to insert it as this omission was a clerical error.

Counsel for defense refused and after considerable argument the matter was taken under advisement by the court.

The third time is a charm, so when James Kelly was called, counsel for defense waived the reading of the complaint and entered a plea of not guilty.

R. Schneider was next called, but owing to the "Capting" being already before the circuit court he was excused.

Mr. Rice then called J. Keegan.

Mr. Drake wished to know how many were to be arraigned. He was informed that it was proposed to arraign all who had been arrested.

Another somewhat lengthy argument followed, counsel for defense desiring that the trials be proceeded with at once.

Mr. Williams insisted that all the defendants should plead and the cases be set down for trial to-day, to be disposed of as fast as possible in regular order.

Counsel for defense finally agreed to this and entered a plea of not guilty in each case, and demanded a jury trial.

Judge Moreland stated that it was a rule of the court that the jury fees must be deposited.

This was not done and in consequence no list of jurors to be summoned had been issued last evening. Probably much time will be wasted to-day in arguing the point as to whether the defendants can have a jury without depositing the fees in advance as required by the court.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Minstrels.—Another packed house greeted Howe's jubilee singers and minstrels last night—about the largest second night audience that ever gathered at New Market. There will be a matinee at two o'clock, and the engagement closes to-night.

The Red Pocketbook.—The entire California theatre company arrived by the State of California yesterday afternoon, and will open at New Market next Monday evening in the latest success, "The Red Pocketbook," a very strong and intensely interesting drama. It will be given by the same people who presented it at the California, including Mrs. F. M. Bates, the old-time Portland favorite, and Messrs. Wessels and Thompson. The stage will be under the management of Mr. Ben Teal, and it is hardly necessary to say that "The Red Pocketbook" will be given comme il faut.

Expose of Spiritualism.—To-morrow night Prof. Chas. H. Read of Philadelphia will hold "an evening with the spirits." Of his appearance at San Jose the Mercury says: "Chas. H. Read gave one of his unique entertainments at the opera house last evening, the same being what he is pleased to term an "expose of mediumistic tricks." His performance viewed in any light is truly remarkable and highly entertaining, eliciting the heartiest applause and perplexing every one. He is far superior to Baldwin, who created a furore here, and guarantees to show his audience how he performs the tricks that so mystify them. It is entirely different from the sleight-of-hand business, with which everyone is familiar, and is as interesting as it is novel and wonderful."

AT THE HIGH SCHOOL.

The exercises yesterday afternoon were witnessed by quite a number of visitors and were good throughout. Following is the programme: Opening song, "Infinite day;" recitation, Tom Farrell; essay, "Dreams," Hattie Jay; essay, "Words," Amanda Frush; recitation, Carrie Mensdorffer; song, "To the Fields Away;" essay, Moses Lyon; recitation, "The Servant Girl," Hattie Higgins; essay, Charles Hoyt; recitation, Lillie Fleischner; essay, "Bagpipes," Lizzie Ley; song, "Come to the Sunset Tree;" recitation, Herbert Crockett; essay, Kilton Goldsmith; essay, "Habeas Corpus," Geo. Hoyt; song, "Land of Light;" essay, "Camping," Ed Giltner; reading, Mary Jenne; essay, "Vacation Scenes," Leona Guild; essay, Emma Friendly; song, "There's Peace on the Deep;" recitation, Mamie Gantenbein; essay, "Julius Cæsar," Anna Knox; recitation, Daisy Holman; essay, "Industry," Sophy Holman; recitation, "National Character," Robert Lindsey; song, "The Homeward Bound;" essay, "Pictures," Rena Goodnough; recitation, Baroette Kaufman; essay, "Affairs in England and Russia," Frank Leonard; recitation, Lizzie Ley; closing song, "Beautiful Moonlight."

KILLED BY A WOMAN.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.

Missoula, Mont., April 19.—One Smith, alias Murphy, alias Beck, was shot and killed by Mrs. Judge Stephens while affecting an entrance into her house last night. He is one of a hard gang and was run out of Butte by the vigilantes. There is talk of organizing a vigilance committee here. The judge was not at home at the time of the shooting.

LIBERTY MEETINGS

Are held every Sunday at Academy Hall, Second and Salmon streets. Admission, 10 cents. At 2, "Resolved, that Christianity accords with modern science," is the question. Prof. Cheney will open on the affirmative. Fred W. Kumpf, Esq., will read "If we knew the baby fingers." At 6:30 Prof. Cheney will lecture. Subject, "The language of symbols," with illustrations. Some of the lost symbols of Free Masonry will be deciphered. Mr. Kumpf has postponed his lecture on "Shakespeare" for one week. Music by Liberty choir. Come and hear the old philosopher who has suffered much for his belief.

THE EAST SIDE.

The board of directors of District No. 2, East Portland, met at the office of the clerk Thursday evening. The assessment roll was submitted to the clerk and adopted. The roll will remain open for inspection for three weeks, when the directors will meet as a board of equalization. In view of the building of schools this season it was decided to close the term two weeks earlier than usual, or the 1st of June, so as to allow ample time for improvements to be completed by the commencement of the new term. This arrangement means extra work for the teachers and extra cramming for the pupils. Nothing was done concerning the purchase of property in the northern part of the district.

The saloon of Henry Pittard, at the I street railroad crossing, was entered Thursday night while the proprietor was absent at the theater and [illegible], liquors and cigars extracted to the value of about $50. Entrance was effected by a window on the west side of the building. No clue to the guilty party.

The wife of Edward Long, residing at Sixth and I streets is lying very low with pneumonia. She is tenderly nursed and cared for by relatives and friends, and the attending physician, Dr. H. Wilson, is doing all that is possible for her relief, yet her recovery is doubtful on account of her age, being now in her 70th year.

Pile driving for the M street ferry landing commenced yesterday.

J. N. Wheeler, while working around a bank at the car shops yesterday, fell and injured his spine. His injuries did not necessitate his taking to bed.

E. Crozier sustained a fracture of the leg yesterday by a fractious horse on which he was riding falling upon it.

MILITARY AND PERSONAL.

Vancouver Independent.

Capt. Frank L. Taylor, 1st art., left San Francisco yesterday with recruits for his battery and the 21st infantry.

Capt. G. M. Downey, 21st inf., has arrived at San Francisco, but will delay joining his station until the first of June.

A. A. Surg. Stacy Tenneway has been relieved from duty at Fort Klamath and ordered to take station at Fort Townsend.

Lieut. J. S. Mallory, 21 inf., arrived down from Fort Coeur d'Alene on the 13th and has assumed his duties as acting aide-de-camp.

Lieut. F. [illegible] Kernan, 21st inf., now on duty at Fort Klamath, has been ordered to report at Vancouver barracks to go on duty in field service.

Capt. John H. Bartholf, med. dept., has applied for an extension of four months to his present leave, on account of the ill health of his wife.

Capt. Gilbert C. Smith, Q. M. dept., reported on the 16th inst. for duty in this department. He will probably be assigned as Asst. Dept. Q. M. at Vancouver barracks.

Lieut. C. E. S. Wood, 21st infantry, having been relieved from duty on Gen. Howard's staff, has started to rejoin his company, now at Boise barracks, where he will probably arrive next week.

Lieut. F. F. Harlow, 1st artillery, has been ordered to meet Capt. Taylor at Roseville Junction, C. P. R. R., for the purpose of conducting recruits for Co. C, 21st infantry, to Fort Klamath.

By special orders of the war department, Captain W. A. Elderkin will relieve Major S. T. Cushing from duty as chief commissary of subsistence of the department. Capt. Elderkin is now at Pueblo, Col. Major Cushing reports at Washington, D. C., for special duty.

A detachment of 48 recruits for the 1st cavalry, under command of Lieut. Best, 1st artillery, arrived in Portland Tuesday night, and left for Fort Walla Walla yesterday. Lieut. Good, 1st cavalry, arrived down to take charge of them, and conduct them to their station.

Companies G and K 21st infantry, constitute the battalion as now organized for duty in the country of Chief Moses, Major W. H. Boyle in command. They will leave Vancouver fully equipped for a six months' stay, and this movement will undoubtedly be followed by that of several of the cavalry troops now in the upper Columbia region.

SALEM NOTES.

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.]

Salem, April 20.

W. F. Boothby and J. M. Martin have returned from their trip to San Francisco.

Hon. T. B. Odeneal and family have taken up their temporary residence at the Chemeketa hotel.

Miss Lottie Byron of Mehama is visiting friends in this city. She will return home on Saturday.

His excellency the governor has appointed J. M. Peterson of Salem, [illegible] W. Brulewell of Amity and W. H. Meinhardt of Fort Klamath notaries public for the ensuing two years.

The party to be given by Hon. and Mrs. Edward Hirsch this evening at their residence in this city in honor of their niece, Miss Eva Meyer, promises to be one of the most brilliant events of the season.

The citizens of Salem have contributed about $25 towards the erection of a monument over the remains of the late Vic. Trevitt. Mr. E. O. Norton, editor of the Talk, had charge of the subscription paper.

Mrs. Blaine, a widow lady from Oakland, came to Salem recently to consult with Dr. Kinney relative to the removal of a large tumor growing on her thigh. He considered the operation exceedingly dangerous, but it was a desperate case in either event, and she concluded to risk the operation. It was performed yesterday, but, as was feared, the shock was too severe, and she died last evening.

SUPREME COURT.

SALMON.

Any prediction relative to the salmon run would be as uncertain as a guess about the weather of the day after to-morrow. There are absolutely no signs which may be relied upon, and whether the run will be heavy or light is one of the things which no fellow can find out. The price of the canned product this fall will, of course, be controlled largely by the amount of the season's pack, and as this cannot be even estimated in advance, speculation as to the future market must be more or less at random. But one thing may be stated as certain, that if the pack this season should be large, the price of the product will be low. The outlook for the packers is bad in either event. A prosperous season in the river means a bad season in the markets; and the only hope for good prices is an off season in the matter of product. For two years the canned salmon market has been manipulated by middle men in the interest of themselves and of the packers, and while they have money jobbers, who were buying at high prices, have found it difficult to get a new dollar for an old one, and foreign purchasers are floundering about to reduce losses to a minimum and get rid of the big stocks hidden away in English warehouses. To this date there has been very meagre business done for future delivery against immense transactions early last year. The American Grocer, New York, writing of salmon, says that the business of packing has been overdone, and that still its extension is being pushed in British Columbia, in Alaska and slightly on the Columbia and Sacramento rivers. Among the large new projects is one that intends purchasing one of the old Pacific Mail steamers with a view of running it to Alaskan waters and converting it into a salmon cannery. The scheme is likely to be carried out next year. This has been done before on a small scale. In Alaska the Indians furnish twenty-five salmon of an average weight of eight to ten pounds for one dollar. This year, on the Columbia, the fishermen are bold and positive in their demand for 30 cents per fish. This move on their part has been a leading factor in checking sales on contract. In Japan salmon packing is being carried on. During this week offers have been invited from buyers here for a block of nearly 10,000 cases packed in that island. The heavy stock of salmon in England, largely composed of Fraser river fish, is a dead weight on the market for new pack. Present holders will have to realize, and hence we find a very weak market in the United Kingdom. Purchases of first class Columbia river brands on contract cannot be made as low as similar brands can now be laid down in New York via England. The lay-down cost of prime brands, offered in London at 23s 6d, is $1 52½ in New York, duty paid; the rate being 35 per cent. upon the tin cans as a manufactured article, with [illegible] on the fish. If the market in England continue dull it is probable prices can be shaded so as to permit of first class brands being landed at New York as low as $1 50.

The world's product of canned salmon has increased remarkably year by year. Accurate figures of last year's pack are not available, but it will not fall below 1,100,000 cases, comparing with previous years as follows

	Cases.		Cases.
1882	1,100,000	1879	580,000
1881	980,000	1878	588,500
1880	840,000	1877	604,782

During the past six years the United Kingdom imported as follows:

	Cases.		Cases.
1882	525,032	1879	364,020
1881	552,461	1878	317,000
1880	297,241	1877	385,410

For the five years prior to 1881 the United Kingdom absorbed an average of 311,148 cases. For the past two years it has received 1,077,500 cases, or 538,750 cases annually, being 227,602 cases above the average of the preceding four years. Does anyone familiar with the condition of the manufacturing and agricultural interests of Great Britain imagine that there was any such increase in consumption? In 1880 the average price of salmon was 21s per case, rising before the close of the year to 23s, and steadily advancing until the average cost in 1882 was 30s per case. And yet, in the face of a higher cost and huge supplies, an attempt is made to make packers and dealers on this side believe the consumption has increased nearly 75 per cent. The stocks found for sale, and the declining market in England, afford no encouragement to the usual heavy buyers on either foreign or home account, to purchase on contract. Hence the holding off.

If prices should drop, the Grocer thinks that eastern buyers would make contracts at once. If opening prices were $1 25 on the river it would induce buying, and the lower the figures the greater would be the demand. The market in the eastern states is in a first-rate condition to invite business when prices are low. Stocks are light there, if we except a block of 7000 to 10,000 cases held by one firm at New York city. New York dealers are all disposed to buy, but prices must be lower than last year, when they ranged from $1 60 to $1 75 in New York, and even then the trade was slow, as jobbers knew there was a very small profit at such figures and no chance for an advance.

Under all these circumstances, cannery men feel that unless the fishermen recede in their demands and the English market is relieved in some miraculous way, that the packing this season will put the salmon market in the same demoralized condition it was in a few years ago.

ARGUMENTS FOR IT.

Taking for its text the license ordinance of this city, the Helena (Montana) Herald says: "High license will furnish the means to pay criminal costs and support poor houses and lunatic asylums which intemperance does so much to fill. High license will make the cost of liquor dear, and we consider it a kindness to give a drinker little rather than much for his money. If the cost of drink were made four times as much as it is, and the quality of the liquor improved in the same proportion it would be the best temperance reformation the country has ever seen. If license is made high those who pay the high prices will watch that the others do not sell, and thus some of the worst places will be closed. Some will say that the poor man should have his poor whisky as well as the richer one his more costly beverage, but we think the poor man will fare the best under the arrangement. If he gets better liquor that will be a gain; if he gets less of it that will be another, and if he gets economical and says he can not afford to drink, it will be the greatest gain of all." In every way, therefore, the argument sustains the new regulation.

It may not be possible in every city to sustain an ordinance like that which we have here, and in some places such ordinance cannot be enacted. But still there is a way. The issue in the recent election in Chicago was high license, and it was defeated by the voting rabble by more than 10,000 majority. A special to the New York Times says: "This is probably the last campaign which will be run by the Chicago republicans on the law and order platform." This spiteful expression is the result of deep disappointment, not perhaps over party defeat, but on account of the fact so rudely disclosed that the slums of a great city, under universal suffrage can control its elections. But there are others who do not despair. Having learned that it is not wise to try to govern a city through the votes of the classes who are enemies of government, they have gone to the legislature of the state to get a high license law, which the voting rumholes of the city cannot repeal. A bill for such law has been passed by one branch of the legislature, and it is believed will be passed by the other.

The friends of the new license and bond ordinance of this city have not concealed from themselves the danger that through some turn of affairs it may be repealed. But if this shall come to pass they are going direct to the legislature for a similar regulation, and may do so in any event. It is just as well to take control of the liquor question out of the hands of the rabble that the free whisky association of Portland can muster at the polls.

ANOTHER CHECKMATE.

Yesterday the free whisky organ renewed its attack of the preceding day on THE OREGONIAN'S specials. In its [illegible] it [illegible] run:

In its issue of yesterday THE OREGONIAN printed as its own "special" dispatches at least five prominent items of telegraphic news that came over the wires to this paper as well as THE OREGONIAN, as the news of the Western associated press. These items were all properly credited by this paper to the above named association, but THE OREGONIAN falsely labeled them as its own "specials," endeavoring in a bungling and discreditable way to deceive the public by claiming as its own "special" news what was really the common property of all the northwestern members of the Western associated press. Below we produce a few instances showing where THE OREGONIAN has falsely marked dispatches of the associated press as their own "special" property.

The free whisky organ follows this up with republication of the items side by side and concludes with remarks about "supreme cheek," "journalistic knavery," and such things as it knows most about. But mark, now, how plain a tale shall put it down:

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH CO., SUPT'S OFFICE,
PORTLAND, OR., April 20, 1883.

THE OREGONIAN PUBLISHING CO., CITY: In reply to your communication for information in this file, I have to say that the items you refer to as published in THE OREGONIAN of the 19th, and of which the headings are given below, were received as specials to THE OREGONIAN. They were delayed in transmission on account of trouble on the wires and under ordinary conditions would have been received in time for publication in THE OREGONIAN of the 18th inst. As they were received as specials to your paper I am obliged to charge them to your account at the usual special rates, although, as you state, the same items were subsequently received in the Western associated press report.

I give below as your request a memorandum of the time each item was received here as special to THE OREGONIAN, and by the W. A. P. report;

Philadelphia Item—"Patti's Threatening Letter," received as special to OREGONIAN, 10:20 A. M., April 18. Received as Western Associated Press report, 12:36 A. M., April 19.

New York Item—"Dinner to Retiring Wool Merchants," received as special to OREGONIAN, 6:20 P.M., April 18. Received as Western Associated Press report, 12:20 A. M., April 19.

Washington D. C. Item—"Langtry Lily in Washington," received as special to OREGONIAN, 1:15 P. M., April 18. Received as Western Associated press report, 12, midnight April 19.

London Item—"In event of Annam Affair Involving France, etc.," received as special to OREGONIAN, 7:50 P. M., April 18. Received as Western associated press report, 10:45 P. M., April 19.

Yours truly,
F. H. LAMB,
Ass't Superintendent.

THE OREGONIAN having now proven that it correctly designated the items referred to as its own specials, may properly add an explanation of the circumstance of their repetition by the Western associated press. This journal is a member of two news associations. One of them is the Western associated press, which began April 1 to furnish a report to journals on this coast; the other is the California associated press, of which this paper has been a member during many years. In addition it has specials from its own correspondents in San Francisco, and from all principal points in the northwest. Of course, all its eastern news comes through San Francisco. Sometimes the same piece of news is sent by both associations. To illustrate by other instances, on Thursday THE OREGONIAN published a special which gave an account of a "spat" between Gov. Butler of Massachusetts and counsel employed in the Tewksbury investigation. The same subsequently came in the common report, and appeared in the free whisky organ on Friday morning. Again, the full report of the recent disaster to shipping in British Columbia, which was printed on Wednesday morning, was a special to the California associated press; a copy was dropped here for THE OREGONIAN on Tuesday morning, but too late for the paper of that day. Tuesday night it was telegraphed back from San Francisco by the Western associated press. Accident, therefore, gave our special to the free whisky organ. Otherwise it would not have had the report at all.

It is proper to say, however, that delivery of the same news by the two associations is unusual. It happens only in the case of a comparatively small number of items. Therefore the great body of special news presented by this paper appears in no other journal of the northwest; and our special report often exceeds the volume of the general one. The transmission of an occasional item in both reports requires us to pay for telegraphing both, and is, of course, a cause of some loss; but this journal does not allow that incident to stand in the way of its determination to furnish all the news. To do this it must have access to all sources from which news can be obtained. No other paper in the northwest receives the report of the California associated press; and therefore THE OREGONIAN, being also a member of that association, designates the dispatches it receives through that association as "special." But it never so designates any dispatch unless so received and paid for by it. In its dealings with its readers it is an inflexible principle to avoid misleading statements and all forms of duplicity or deception; first, because it is right, and second, because no journal can prosper in any other way.

But the free whisky organ takes the other course. Daily it prints as "special" a mass of matter which never comes to it by wire. Every newspaper man detects at once every one of these fraudulent "dispatches," which are either clipped entire from eastern papers or re-written here in the hope of disguising them. For example, the "special" in yesterday's hoodlum organ, headed "The Coming Tide—Immigration Pouring into the Northwest by thousands," is the substance, and in many parts the very words, of articles that appeared in the St. Paul and Minneapolis papers about two weeks ago. The pretended interview with the chief of the bureau of statistics at Washington about "The Hog," some days further back, was made up out of a copy of the report of that bureau printed some months ago; and so on. These paltry devices deceive nobody except those who having eyes to see see not.

They who have been long acquainted with THE OREGONIAN—even its enemies—long since learned the futility of attempting to impugn its statements of facts or the integrity of its news. On these points it has taught everybody who has assailed it lessons which they remember. Perhaps the organ of hoodlumism and free whisky will in time learn as much on this point as some others have—if it be not too stupid and survive long enough.

The low class of wholesale dealers who back the retail venders of the bowel-scorching aqua fortis dispensed in the unlicensed drinking holes of the city complain that enforcement of the new ordinance is unjust because it is impossible first, for so many to pay the license and, second, for so many to give the bond. That is just what was anticipated and desired. To furnish security for all the saloons, they say, would require 300 bondsmen and it is out of the question to find so many persons with the qualifications required, who would go on the bonds. Undoubtedly. Good citizens expect to get rid of at least half the saloons of the city, including all the vile dens, by this ordinance. That is just what it is intended to accomplish.

The backbone of the lawless liquor association of Portland is a set of "agents" and "wholesale dealers" who have long been "forcing the trade." These enemies of public peace and order, with a selfishness and brutality that render them wholly insensible to any of the obligations of decency, simply want to make money by pushing a traffic upon the very lowest levels of vice and infamy. So they stock vile holes all over the city, and collect the proceeds of drunkenness in as shameless a way as the lowest courtesan plies her trade.

Tracklaying on the eastern division of the Northern Pacific is now within 60 miles of Helena. On the western division it is within 60 miles of Missoula. It is expected to reach both points by the middle of June. Between Helena and Missoula the distance is 110 miles. At this time the track to be laid is less than 230 miles. It ought to be completed without difficulty before the end of September.

A correspondent at St. Helens, whose letter we print this morning, thinks THE OREGONIAN made too broad a statement last week in asserting that if in the future Oregon wheat shall be put on shipboard at Puget sound, or at a point on the Columbia river below St. Helens bar, Portland will suffer serious loss. He thinks, and so far, we must admit his criticism to be just, that the contest, if there is to be a contest, will be between the Columbia river and Puget sound, and that Portland need have no fear for her commercial position so long as the Columbia river is our chief channel of commerce. If, as he suggests, attempts to deepen the river channels should fail, we have the option of loading ships on the Columbia river or on the sound. The distance from Portland to deep water—the nearest point is Columbia City—is only 30 miles, and we shall soon have a rail as well as a water connection with it. Columbia City is finely adapted for a deep-water shipping point. The heaviest vessels can come within a plank's length of the shore and the banks are firm and above the reach of the highest floods, while the stream affords anchorage room for any number of ships. Still, the thing for Portland to do is to open the channels. As between the Columbia river and Puget sound, Portland merchants, who now control all, and who will continue to control most of the grain export business, will choose the former; but the advantages of loading at our own docks are too important to let slip, and we mistake the spirit of our merchants if they allow other points to reap them. In shipping from so near a point as Columbia City, it is true Portland would retain the local trade of the shipping, which after awhile, will be a great business of itself; but in letting its business go even so far from home it is in danger of letting it go on to the Sound. We must load our ships at our own docks.

PLEA FOR BETTER ROADS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

The point of question I wish to ask through your paper is this: Is there no way in which the public can reach the county judge and commissioners so that we can get some work done on the roads east of the Willamette river? I was a member of a cortege to Lone Fir cemetery two weeks ago, and since that date I have often thought if I should die I would rather adopt the modern cremation code than have my poor old bones shaken to pieces over that so-called county road.

Now I am no chicken in Oregon. I helped eat the first ox that was barbecued for the occasion of the laying the first plank and driving the first spike to lay the first plank road to Hillsboro, in which I took an active part and worked with a good will. Next came the scheme for a line of ocean steamers to ply between Portland and San Francisco, which was easily found in the Gold Hunter. Perhaps some of your readers remember the time as also this scheme.

Now it is good roads we want. We east siders ought to be entitled to have some of the county money expended on this side of the river. I don't blame Mr. C. P. Bacon or any other man for wanting a good road to his farm. If I had the money that had been lavished on the canyon road since Ben Stark was supervisor I think I could pave the same with trade dollars. All that I ask is for the county fathers to bear in mind that we east siders are a portion of Multnomah county's tax-payers, and we pay our tax as regularly as the never-failing collectors call on us—as the sun rises in the east. I presume that the west siders imagine that our mud all dries up before that orb crosses the Willamette. Had that sun to cross the ferry and wait for boats as long as other sons are compelled to, that no doubt would be the case. But as the sun crosses on a free bridge we simply say why cannot we? If any one should ask who this old pioneer is that ate the ox and drove the spike, tell them it is not Captain Ankeny, the most enterprising man in the state, but merely a '49 webfooter styled EAST SIDER.

THE HIGHER EDUCATION OF WOMEN

Interesting Lecture by Mr. H. ... in the Unitarian Chapel

... What a flood of entire ... mental inferiority ... and enforced ... mentally for which ... partial superiority at least in ... The experience of the past but a slow ... of aspiration towards the ... of the past because of that past or of any record in it ... place bars against the doing of that which you allege cannot be done. Why not at least admit the experiment and give woman a chance to fail if that is what is predestined?

Physical inferiority to which the answer is the actual experience in the last half century of teachers in institutions where there has been co-education. Brain work if well directed, is healthy. The schools have been most carelessly charged with ill health which in the majority of cases as proved by statistics was produced by social excess or home neglects.

Referring to the recent protests of D. Morgan Dix against the present time and the present status of womankind the lecturer pertinently asked Which of these ages are preferred since this is deemed so recreant? At one point of the lecture the satire was most impressive when it was said You in one breath deep so woman for screaming at a mouse yet force her into frivolities by denying her mind and helping her to forget herself in a purpose. The man who waxes eloquent over the differing mind of woman goes home to dinner and divides the same food with his children of either sex. If there are such differences must they not hold for digestion as well as intellect?

Finally it was eloquently claimed and proved by many examples 1—That women have acquired education and developed the highest results through it. 2—That all that ennobles womanhood is lifted and made infinitely nobler by culture unfolding her nature, giving her equal opportunities with husband and brother. Home is never more home than when its founders have brought to the sacred companionship all that is meant by an educated mind conscience and heart.

The audience room was completely filled and the wish expressed by every one that the lecture be published as a pamphlet. It certainly deserves an audience of thousands.

BRIEF MENTION.

Minstrel matinee to-day.

The State of California arrived here at 5 P. M. yesterday.

Frank Dekum has sold the old buildings on the corner of Third and Washington streets for $25.

Messages at the Western Union office for J. M. Abbott, R. G. Mudge, Joseph Karkley and George P. Wall.

Thomas Flannerty convicted of larceny was denied a new trial yesterday in the state circuit court and sentenced to the penitentiary for one year.

Portland Band of Hope No. 1 will meet this afternoon in Y. M. C. A. hall, at two o'clock. Children with their parents and friends, are urged to be present.

Martha Washington camp No. 1, Daughters of Liberty have their monthly social to-night. There will be a good turn out, as their socials are always largely attended and are very enjoyable affairs.

A bill of sale was filed yesterday in the county clerk's office transferring the furniture of C. A. Allsky in the house on Taylor street between First and West Park to F. Alex Meyer. The purchase price was $2000.

Frank Hacherly has begun suit in the state circuit court against F. W. Morgan and a writ of attachment was issued yesterday placing the sheriff in charge of the latter's nursery farm at the old Ellis place situate on the Milwaukie road.

Charles Howard and John Dixon convicted of robbery and larceny respectively take life easy behind the bars at the county jail, awaiting sentence from Judge Stott which shall tell how long the penitentiary gates will close upon them.

The trial of the 43 Chinamen indicted for gambling, was begun yesterday before Judge Stott and a jury in the state circuit court. The whole day was occupied in the taking of testimony on the part of the prosecution and this was not finished when the court adjourned.

The lecture given by J. K. Phillips upon "The battles of the war of the rebellion" under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic at Red Men's hall last evening for the benefit of Burnside camp No. 1, Sons of Veterans was well attended, and was exceedingly instructive as well as interesting.

THE FREE WHISKY CASES.

All the Arrested Dive Keepers Arraigned ...

[illegible]

... Mr Williams ...

The third ... was called ... of the complaint ...

Mr Drake wished to know how many were to be arraigned. He was informed that it was proposed to arraign all who had been arrested.

Another somewhat lengthy argument followed counsel for defense desiring that the trials be proceeded with at once.

Mr Williams insisted that all the defendants should plead and the cases be set down for trial to day to be disposed of as fast as possible in regular order.

Counsel for defense finally agreed to this and entered a plea of not guilty in each case and demanded a jury trial.

Judge Moreland stated that it was a rule of the court that the jury fees must be deposited.

This was not done and in consequence a list of jurors to be summoned had been issued last evening. Probably much time will be wasted to-day in arguing the point as to whether the defendants can have a jury without depositing the fee in advance as required by the court.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Minstrels.—Another packed house greeted Howe's jubilee singers and minstrels last night—about the largest second night audience that ever gathered at New Market. There will be a matinee at two o'clock, and the engagement closes to-night.

The Red Pocketbook.—The entire California theatre company arrived by the State of California yesterday afternoon, and will open at New Market next Monday evening in the latest success "The Red Pocketbook," a very strong and intensely interesting drama. It will be given by the same people who presented it at the California including Mrs F. M. Bates the old time Portland favorite and Messrs Wessels and Thompson. The stage will be under the management of Mr Ben Teal and it is hardly necessary to say that "The Red Pocketbook" will be given comme il faut.

Expose of Spiritualism.—To-morrow night Prof Chas H. Read of Philadelphia will hold an evening with the spirits. Of his appearance at San Jose the Mercury says "Chas H Read gave one of his unique entertainments at the opera house last evening the same being what he is pleased to term an expose of spiritualistic tricks. His performance viewed in any light is truly remarkable and highly entertaining, eliciting the hearts of applause and perplexing every one. He is far superior to Baldwin who created a furore here ... guarantees to show this audience how he performs the tricks that so mystify them. It is entirely different from the sleight-of-hand business with which everyone is familiar and is as interesting as it is novel and wonderful.

AT THE HIGH SCHOOL.

The exercises yesterday afternoon were witnessed by quite a number of visitors and were good throughout. SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 21, 1883.

THROUGH TO JACKSONVILLE.

Notes by the Way—The Willamette Valley in Spring Attire.

QUIDDITIES OF A STAGE RIDE, WITH SOME REMARKS ON THE DRUMMER.

Jacksonville and the Rogue River Valley—Its Industries and Products of the Country Bright Prospects for the Future.

JACKSONVILLE, Oregon, April 16, 1883.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

A trip to Jacksonville from Portland at this season of the year is one of pleasure, notwithstanding some almost unavoidable inconveniences. From Portland to Roseburg, through the Willamette and also the Umpqua valley, I noticed that almost everywhere the farmers had taken advantage of the fine weather of last month to resow the fields where the grain had been frozen. Occasionally a place would be seen where, for experiment or other cause, the grain had not been resown. There the grain was coming up in spots, but elsewhere the young wheat was growing luxuriantly. The principal points of interest to a traveler at this season of the year, between Portland and Roseburg, is the view of the wide extent of fertile lands in the Willamette and Umpqua valleys, and the hills green with the young native grasses. There are, too, the distant mountains to add interest to the scenery, and an occasional view of the rivers and creeks which drain this well-watered section. The train left Roseburg at nearly dark for the "front," which is now at a place called Riddle's, 30 miles distant. At Riddles the alleged town is more than half a mile from the station. It consists of the farm house of Mr. Riddle, on whose farm the place is located, and several new and roughly-constructed buildings. A stay all night is something like the policeman's life—"not a happy one." The trouble is this, only, that Riddles is a temporary place of importance, and will be left behind as the railroad advances. From this on there is great trouble by reason of the limited capacity of the alleged stages. The regular six-horse coaches are not now running, and the canvas-covered four-horse wagons, which are doing duty as stages, will carry five [illegible] persons only besides the driver. It is often that a person from Portland is compelled to stay at Riddles one or two days waiting his turn, or else, at a large expense, hire a private conveyance. Now that the railroad is building, the stage company should provide conveyances for those travelers, even if they had to put on another stage or two. At present the stage must travel slow, [illegible] on account of the bad roads, but because of the large amount of mail and express matter. It is a question which at present concerns the inhabitants of this whole southern country, as well as the general traveling public.

The roads at present for many miles from Riddles, [illegible] part of the [illegible] railroad, are [illegible] horrible [illegible] before we reached [illegible] as we came [illegible] a piece of road [illegible] roads [illegible] and very little [illegible] would make them very good. [illegible] that there is [illegible] a fresh [illegible] for [illegible] Our progress was some-[illegible] where the woods had a weird ap-[illegible] the light thrown by the reflectors of the stage. At length when we had reached the summit it was about midnight. The night was dark, without moon or stars; the lowering clouds scudding along before the fresh south wind gave promise of rain. The next station was about four miles away. I noticed the driver settle himself firmly in his seat and gather his reins securely in his hands. He spoke a few words of cheering and appropriate profanity to the horses, then placed his foot securely in the brake for a case of emergency. There was a crack of the whip and the horses quickened their pace. Never before had I truly known the pleasure of a stage ride. At first it was a sharp trot and then it was a run. In and out amongst the bushes, seemingly going on a ride to death we went, guided by the skill of the driver and the intelligence of the horses. No road could I distinguish. Here it seemed that we must run into a tree, but the stage turned on a curve and darted between the young trees and chapparel; there two trees stood so close together that it seemed certain destruction to go between them, but there was a foot of space on either side of the stage, and the driver confident in his skill thought no more of it, nor slackened the pace of the horses on that account, than if it had been a mile. As the light shone out on the manzanita bushes, their light green leaves seen but for a moment seemed the most beautiful shrubs, with every leaf a full blown flower, and the pines were as black as the night. The dark night, the white horses, the occasional flashes of fire as the iron shoes struck the sharp gravel, the swaying of the stage and the rapid run of the horses, with the spice of danger in favor, all these gave me a pleasure I never before had experienced. It was exhilarating—a kind of intoxication in fact, but it gave no headache in the morning.

We arrived at Rock Point, in Jackson county, at 2 o'clock in the morning. It was a long and dreary waiting for 7 o'clock to come—the hour that we were to leave for Jacksonville. As it grew light we saw that we were near Rogue river. It is a beautiful, small river, not navigable, running there between banks of solid rock. A little rain had fallen during the night and laid whatever dust the sun of the few preceding days had made. Rock Point is sixteen miles only from Jacksonville. The road is good and the country quite level. A large part of the way the stage road runs on the eastern slope of the mountains. As you ride along you get a fine view of the Rogue river valley—for its size the most beautiful and richest valley in Oregon. Its [illegible] groves of tall and well shaped pines, the wide-spreading oaks, and that shapely and beautiful tropical-looking evergreen, the madrone, relieve what would else be a monotonous level plain. The valley has the appearance of being entirely surrounded by high mountains. Far in the east is Mt. Pitt, a snow peak similar in shape and of the apparent size of Mt. St. Helens, as seen from South Portland. "Away along here," says the driver, pointing with his whip to some meadows, "was the first mining done in the valley, and plenty of gold could be taken out now if they had water only for hydraulic mining."

Jacksonville is a charming little place built on a hill side. Here was found some of the richest placers in Oregon. Back of the town are evidences of the flush times of long ago. But for the lack of water mining would be very profitable within the town limits even now. The town has a thrifty, substantial look. More of the business firms are in brick buildings than in wooden ones. The principal hotel—the United States, is a large two-story brick, owned and kept by Madame Holt—well-known throughout all this southern country. She was born in France and has seen better days. When Jacksonville was young and she, and an ingenious belle she was. I doubt not but there were many heart-burnings in the long ago. But time brings changes to us all, and the madame now has silver in her hair, is kind to the poor, also to the rich; has still some of her winning ways and abundant memories of times gone by. Her old time sprightliness is not now as apparent in her carriage as in former times. But although fortune has been fair [illegible] to her she knows how to keep a hotel, at which you must not fail to stop should you go to Jacksonville. The people of Jacksonville are a whole-souled, generous, open hearted people, glad to see strangers who do not come here to run the town. They have that frank and manly way usually found in the mining districts of the Pacific coast, a way which came from the kind of men who settled and changed where money was plenty and cowardice and meanness unknown. Jacksonville and her citizens have been without many of the luxuries of other places, but she has not some of the vices which other places [illegible] along with their luxuries. The only means of reaching here so far have been over the wagon roads. Freights have been high. The people are anxiously waiting for the sound of the locomotive, last open sesame of all isolated inland places.

Most of the soil in the valley is very fine, but there are sterile spots, usually surrounded by the richest black loam, looking so much as though it were half gunpowder that one almost fears to throw down a lighted match.

As I passed a field with several hundred acres of wheat growing and in the very best condition, I asked a man repairing a fence whether the land yielded well. He said, "Last year there were in wheat 80 acres only, but it yielded 3000 bushels, which I saw measured myself."

In many places large fields of alfalfa are growing. It needs to be planted but once, and there is a voluntary crop forever after. It is a foot high now. I am told that it averages three crops a year. There is no place in Oregon so well adapted for dairy farming. Before many years I believe that Rogue river butter will have the call in the Portland market if the farmers here will take the trouble to make first-class butter. They have the soil, feed and climate, their own industry is the only other requisite.

There is no place in Oregon better adapted for fruit raising. Peaches, grapes, apples, cherries, strawberries and other small fruits are said to have a size and flavor which cannot be excelled. The only orchards of any size in the valley now are of apple trees. It seems almost too bad that they did not several years ago, start large orchards of peach trees in anticipation of the coming of the railroad. It is not too late now. This valley cannot raise too many peaches, for all that are not used as fresh fruit will be taken by the canneries. It is said that the peaches here are far better than any grown in California and rival even the Delaware peaches.

In the suburbs of Jacksonville are two vineyards having together an aggregate of 25 acres. The market has been so limited for fresh grapes that most of them have been made into wine. The owners evidently have not yet learned to make the grape into its best wine. I tasted some white wine which was a light, very dry wine, quite palatable. But a red wine which is here called claret—well, I pass. It is said, however, that a good article of grape brandy is made here.

Jacksonville has a population of about 1000. It is not likely that it will ever be a place of any great size. It was built up mainly by the stimulus of placer mining. It is on one side of the valley, and has no especial facilities for manufactures although there is a good steam grist mill and a distillery here, while Ashland, 15 miles away has good water power. The Rogue river valley is not large—say 15 miles wide by 30 miles long. These would be its extreme dimensions. The foundation is now laying here for a new court house to cost $30,000. The building will be finished this year. There are three churches. The Presbyterians have a new church, one of the neatest and most tasteful buildings I have seen in any of the small towns in Oregon. The Methodists also have a church, while the Catholics have a church and a girls' boarding school, all neat, nice-looking buildings. There also is a fine public school building with a good school in it. To save the town from the reputation of being too goody goody I will mention that there are seven saloons here. Jacksonville is very orderly indeed and I notice a very pleasant lack of hoodlumism. Still, if outsiders come here for the purpose of taking the town and setting it to rights, they are likely to fail in such a [illegible] missionary labor. There are a number of very handsome dwellings here, several being brick. Take it all in all Jacksonville is a clean healthy-looking place, and a citizen of it need not be ashamed to claim it as his residence. There are two papers here, the Times (dem.) and the Sentinel (rep.), both party organs, but good local papers. I notice a commendable lack of the celebrated "Oregon style" in their allusions to each other.

Most of the farmers are men who came here early in the fifties or before and live on their own donation land claims. Most of the farms have on them good houses and barns. The fences are good and show that they are well attended to. Heretofore but small crops have been raised for the want of a market. But from this on, Rogue river valley wheat will be known in the market. With all the temptations to idleness—a rich soil and limited market—the whole valley shows for itself that its farmers are thrifty, industrious men, who need but a market to be as prosperous and well to do as in any section of the state.

From its natural beauty and delightful climate it will not be many years until tourists will find that the Rogue river valley is one of the most charming spots on the whole Pacific coast. V. B.

RELIGIOUS SYMBOLISM.

O. B. Frothingham in North American Review.

The open-minded student of antiquity is amazed when he comes across the fact of the universality of religious symbols affecting the presence of the same ideas from age to age. The emblems which are perpetuated in stone in the galleries and churches of Rome, which flame in unmaterial mosaics from the walls of temples in ancient, desolate Ravenna, are found in Greek and Oriental shrines, on coins, entablatures, sepulchral monuments, old as the oldest remains of human art, old as the records of the race. The cross, symbol of the sacrificial overflow of life; the dove, symbol of the gentle motion of a descending spirit; the cup, symbol of imparted spiritual vitality; the star, sign of deathless promise; the serpent, emblem at once of mortality and immortality, of the changeable and the unchangeable; the fish, the host, the ark recur again and again, with every form of suggestion, in every species of combination, understood, not understood, misunderstood, but revered still. There are crucifixions of unknown origin and antiquity—the old Irish cross of Tuam, of Asiatic design; an ancient image at Kalaseh, in Nubia, a figure on the Egyptian obelisk, near the basilica of St. John Lateran at Rome; a bronze relic, brought to Ireland by Phœnicians, ages ago, representing Buddha, or it may be Krishna, on the cross—which might have served as models for Christian artists in stone or on canvas, emblems of the overflowing divine love, the devoted self-sacrifice of the greatest characters, the victory of the spiritual over the natural. There is a picture of Devaki and Krishna, the Hindu mother and child, in Creuzer's "Symbolik," taken from Moore's "Hindu Pantheon," which might stand for a Christian ideal, so exact is the delineation of the Virgin with the baby Christ on her lap, and the worshiping woman in front. There is a sculpture of Venus Aphrodite in the venerable church of St Denis in France, that, with very slight alteration, would pass for an Assumption of Mary. There are symbols of trinity—Jewish, Hindu, Persian, Assyrian, Egyptian—which distinctly foreshadow the Christian idea, showing how it was prefigured or rather in some form was eternally manifest in ante-Christian periods. Our Christmas observances had their historical association with the mystical rights of Bona Dea, the Saturnalia, and Liberalia—with festivities of pagan Rome. The "Mater Dolorosa" of Catholic art has its counterpart in Ceres. The "Good Shepherd" of Catacombs in Rome is a copy from the "Aristeus," or from the "Apollo Nomios," which show the same figure in the same posture on pagan sarcophagi. The good Christians should delight to tell of these coincidences, for they suggest the omnipresence of emblems which are dear to him, and they indicate the world-wide dominion of spiritual truth. The thoughtful observer notes their resemblance, and is struck by the evidence they furnish of some divine presence, for in studying these symbols of religion one is impressed by the conviction that they are not of incidental, local, earthly, or even human extraction; that they are not evolved, but communicated; not poetic fancies, but fixed truths, exhibited to mankind in visible shape—the only shape in which they could be exhibited. The character of the symbols, which look forced and artificial, as contrasted with the natural tastes of any people; their invariable association with religious festivals; their presence in temples; their connection with priests and sacred persons; the depth of significance attached to them; their introduction into the holy mysteries and into the ceremonies of initiation; their sculptured forms on funeral and other monuments on coins and medals—preclude the theory which assigns to them a terrestrial origin. They hang above the heads, always, of the great multitude of worshipers, only a very small number of whom comprehend their meaning. In the vast majority of instances they were high in advance of the people who revered them; in some cases they must have been violently opposed to the current life. For the credit of human nature one is constrained to believe that the women of Greece and Egypt were, against their will, images that religious associations alone hallowed; for the honor of womanhood one is compelled to think that the women of Babylon, who, once in their lives, on certain occasions, offered themselves in the temple of Venus to any stranger bringing money to the shrine, did so out of obedience to a sanction by them reputed to be divine. The orgies at the festive rites of Astarte, Ceres, Juno, Aphrodite, must have been prompted by something differing from an animal impulse. The action, however mistaken and indecent was the involuntary result of a motive regarded as supreme. Their performance however wise and unseemly, were acts of worship.

ELDER MOSE KITE.

(Long, Kansas, Grief, Jan. 28, 1883.

Most of our older citizens will remember Mose Kite, who lived in Petersburg Bottom, the hero of an [illegible] early parts of history, who was of stalwart build and powerful [illegible], who in [illegible] led the long [illegible] to Pike's Peak, who fought the Indians on the plains and was shot through the body; who on his return here after the [illegible] was converted and baptized by Elder Beauchamp of the Christian church at Petersburg Bottom, and became a revival preacher of celebrity all through this section. They will also recall the fact that, attacked with consumption and reduced to a skeleton, he was obliged to remove to the Rockies in the hope of saving his life. None thought he would succeed. Last fall, however, the editor of this paper met him at the head of the Republican river, bigger and more robust than ever. "Why, I thought you had died of consumption long, long ago, elder?"

"Me? I never had consumption, man! though people thought that was what ailed me, and I thought so myself. But the doctors sent me on a wild-goose chase after a dozen other diseases, just as fatal, and this was the wildest one of all."

The good elder then recounted to us, in a happy vein, his many adventures in the rough and ready life he had led, "but," he said, "remarkable as you may think my warlike life has been, I have a much more interesting story to tell you."

"You know what a rough, noisy fellow I used to be; and I could stand any hardship. Why, on a wager, I have knocked down an ox and a mule with my fist. I have fought ruffians, border outlaws and Indians, but I was

ROUGHED FOR YEARS

By a more dangerous unseen enemy that was ever getting me more completely in its clutches. I was shot by an Indian in a fight on the plains, but that wound healed readily and gave me but little trouble. After I returned to Kansas and commenced preaching, I first began to give way. I had a dull feeling, accompanied with a pain in the right side. Dr. Butler, our family physician, said my liver was out of order, caused by the malaria of the bottoms. I had always had an appetite like an ostrich, but my digestion became seriously impaired. While on the circuit preaching I consulted a doctor, who said I had dyspepsia. After that distressing palpitation of the heart followed, and the physician said this was caused by my indigestion and diseased liver which would probably terminate fatally. Sometimes I had ravenous appetite, at others none at all. I was feverish and then chilly. My food seemed to do me no good. A specialist told me I had a tape-worm! Then I was troubled with unusual quantities of water and a frequent desire to urinate, which was done with difficulty and great pain. I then began to suffer severe pain in the loins and the small of the back, accompanied with sudden attacks of dizziness, during which I had to sit or lie down, to avoid falling. I was forced to abandon because I could no longer ride on horseback, or trust myself out alone. I began to be seriously alarmed, and sought the advice of the most learned physician within reach. He said that my frequent horseback riding had jostled and jarred me until the old Indian wound, which had injured my kidneys had become inflamed. He treated me with medicines and electricity also, but gave me no permanent benefit. My painful symptoms all returned. I began to cough, got very thin and my legs were disagreeably numb. I began to despair. At each attempt to cure, my ailments became worse, with new symptoms. I next consulted a celebrated physician from the east, who, after thumping and examining me, stated that I was in an advanced stage of consumption and threatened with diabetes and paralysis. He thought I might possibly prolong my life for a year or two, by seeking a higher and drier climate. This was my condition when the people in your part of the country last saw me.

Then I started for the Rockies, but liked this country, and settled here. At first the change helped me, but about three years ago the benefit ceased. Then I failed so rapidly that I could be out of bed only part of each day. All my old symptoms returned. At this crisis, a party of eastern gentlemen, made my house their headquarters. In the party was a Dr. Wakefield, who informed me that I had a bad case of incurable Bright's Disease, and gave me a preparation, which might, he said, ease me for a few months, but that was the best that could be done. Around the bottle was a newspaper. Now a newspaper was a rarity in our home, and I sat in my chair looking it over when my eye providentially fell upon an article relating a most wonderful cure of Bright's disease—the very malady that was killing me—by the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, (of Rochester, N.Y.) Convinced that further delay would be fatal, and everything else failing, the next morning I dispatched one of my boys to the nearest railroad station, many miles distant, to obtain a bottle of the Safe Cure. The druggist said the demand for the Cure was so great he could not keep it in stock, and he had to send to Kansas City for more. It was more than a week before it arrived, and I was daily getting weaker. But it came at last and I at once began to take it. When I told Dr. Wakefield what I was taking, he gave me a look, half of scorn, half of pity, as much as to say,

ON A BUFFALO HUNT,

'POOR FELLOW!

He is putting his trust in a humbug.' Nevertheless I persevered, and for the past year and a half I have been as stout and rugged as I ever was in my life. After escaping the attacks of Indians and half a dozen doctors, I was lying at the mercy of a still more dreadful foe that was about giving me the finishing blow, when that great remedy stepped in, slew my adversary, and placed me firmly on my feet once more. I have commenced preaching again; for I look upon the circumstances and manner of my cure as a direct interposition of Providence, and to Providence are my services due. That is my story. I think it is as good as a romance—and much better, for it is true."

Such is the substance, and very nearly the language of Elder Kite's narrative. Those who read it, and are suffering, may benefit by his experience, if they will follow his example.

Under Water.

"Does a diver have any unpleasant sensations while at work?" "None, save a drumming in the ears; and this will sometimes destroy the hearing if the diver remains too long below. Four hours—two in the morning and two in the afternoon—constitute a day's work, and if the diver restricts himself to this limit there is little or no danger of his becoming deaf; but if he goes much beyond it he is pretty sure to injure his hearing. I once remained under water for nine hours, and as a consequence completely lost the use of my left ear for three months, during which time I suffered agony with ear ache. Eventually, however, my hearing became normal again. Aside from this, the sensations are delightful, and I feel just as well, happy and contented at the bottom of the sea as ever can under any circumstances. While engaged in raising the sunken schooner Dauntless in Kingstown, Jamaica, on the 18th of August, 1881, I became so disgusted at the stupidity of the men above in answering my signals that I took a book that I found in the captain's cabin and, sitting down, read it for nearly an hour. I once knew a diver, Tom Brintly by name, who, though a thoroughly competent man and a good fellow, was a little too fond of stimulants. On one occasion he went down with a pretty good cargo of spirits aboard, and the men above, not knowing his condition, became seriously alarmed when several hours passed by without their receiving any signals from him or any response to those they made to him. Another diver was sent down to look for him, and found him lying on his back on the bottom of the ocean, sixty feet below the surface, fast asleep. 'What is the greatest depth I ever descended to?' Well, about ninety feet, and it takes me about three minutes to go down that far." —Philadelphia Times.

THE LITTLE WHITE HEARSE.

BY J. W. RILEY.

As the little white hearse went glimmering by—
The man on the coal cart jerked his lines,
And smoothed the lid of either eye,
And turned and stared at the business signs;
And the street car driver stopped and beat
His hands on his shoulders and gazed up-street,
Till his eye on the long track reached the sky—
As the little white hearse went glimmering by.

As the little white hearse went glimmering by—
A stranger petted a ragged child
In a crowded walk—and she knew not why,
But he gave her a coin for the way she smiled;
And a bootblack thrilled with a pleasure strange,
As a customer put back his change
With a kindly hand and a grateful sigh—
As the little white hearse went glimmering by.

As the little white hearse went glimmering by—
A man looked out of a window dim,
And his cheeks were wet and his heart was dry—
For a dead child, even, were dear to him!
And he thought of his empty life and said:
"Loveless alive, and loveless dead;
Nor wife nor child in earth or sky!"
As the little white hearse went glimmering by.

"PNEUMONIA" AND DRINK.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

You have given your readers some very intelligent observations on the causes of the increased prevalence of pneumonia. Doubtless hot rooms and habitual seclusion from fresh air, with sudden transitions from hot to cold air, and want of habitual exercise out of doors are in a multitude of cases the causes of this trying disease. Will you allow [illegible] the following as pointing out another cause? [illegible] B. WISTAR MORRIS.

Dr. William A. Hammond, formerly surgeon general of the United States, by way of a public precaution, said to the New York Herald representative: "I would advise people to abstain from whisky, especially in this sort of weather, for such drinking predisposes to pneumonia. I have known the cases of [illegible] who died from this disease, but the disease had to [illegible] by the [illegible] of a cold."

Mind and body alike suffer from the effects of torpid liver, which results in dyspepsia, sick headache, [illegible] Dr. [illegible] Wood's [illegible] the liver, relieves [illegible] and strengthens the entire system. Druggists.

Liver disease, headache and constipation caused by bad digestion, quickly cured by Brown's Iron Bitters.

The body of Tague, drowned in Yaquina bay, was recovered between Yaquina and Ford's Point.

"My hands were covered with little dry scales. They have disappeared and I'm better than I have been for 20 years, from using Dr. Benson's Skin Cure." A. M. Noble, Selma, N. C., July 2, '82.

AFTERNOON DISPATCHES.

A Storm Succeeded by a Calm.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—It was expected that Herr Most would meet the delegates from the federation of labor at their hall last night for the purpose of an interchange of views on the labor question. This meeting did not take place, and Most waited at his hotel for the committee, but a stormy debate took place in the [illegible] committee, starting in the [illegible] some expressing the fear that [illegible] would attempt to [illegible] it should such a meeting take place. The discussion [illegible] personal words [illegible] Most being a terrorist [illegible] federation of labor being about equally divided between native born and foreigners. After adjournment at the hall a president and the rest of the delegates visited Most at his hotel, who there was already assembled a committee from the [illegible]. A delegate from the [illegible] moved that the [illegible] consider itself a meeting of individuals [illegible] and not representing any union or societies. This was carried and Herr Most was requested to state his views on the labor question, which he did in a 10 minutes' speech delivered in English.

A Delayed Message and a Suit.

WACO, TEX., April 20.—A suit was filed in the district court of this county to-day by A. H. Stuart against the Western Union telegraph company for $5,000 damages. The suit is based upon alleged failure on the part of the telegraph company to deliver promptly a message from plaintiff's dying brother at Marshall, Texas, inviting plaintiff to come to him. Plaintiff alleges that the message was given the operator at Marshall February 3, and not delivered to him at Waco until the morning of the 5th.

A Hotel Change.

NEW YORK, April 20.—Walton, who retires from the St. James hotel this week, promises to build within a block thereof the finest hotel in the world. Wm. M. Conner, manager of the John McCullough combination, and well known in connection with race courses, succeeds Walton in the possession of the St. James.

Movements of the President.

SAVANNAH, GA., April 19.—President Arthur and party will land to-morrow and hold a reception in the afternoon. They remain until Friday and then go north by rail.

SONGS OF A SOCIALIST.

Herr Most Delivers a More Moderate Speech than is Usual with Him.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Herr Most delivered a speech to-night in Workingmen's hall, the greater part of which was devoted to the defense of himself against newspapers, which he said had charged him with advising murder and robbery, to the inciting and destruction of labor-saving machinery, and the dividing of all capital among the poor. He said: "They call me murderer because I said it would be impossible for me to lament the death of a monster like that of the czar executed by the hands of his oppressed people. They call me robber because I show my people how they were being robbed by the capitalist class; because I said it was necessary to bring forward another such production by which workingmen could enjoy the results of their industry. Bribes for thieves became very much excited, and denounced me as a robber. They misrepresent me in the highest degree when they say I advised a division of all capital among the people. All I asked for was the abolition of present unjust division of the fruits of industry of workingmen among capitalists with regard to labor-saving machinery. I claim we are entitled to our share in every new invention. He who declares that the results of science should belong exclusively to some privileged class, also nonsense and is a robber. I want to see the formation of another system in which machinery like all productions should belong to the several societies and not to the few rich men. They dig pits for the others, have land for farmers, build manufactories for operatives and provide nothing for idlers. That's what I want." Speaking of the condition of the laboring classes in Europe he said: "All legal means for getting any reform or progress have been taken away from us and nothing is now left us but force. He advises the workingmen of America to organize well, and as quickly as possible, so as to bring political power into the hands of the people. Capitalists in this country, he said, would not give up their privileges, their power and their tyrannous influences without the exercise of force to compel them to do so."

WISCONSIN FLOODS.

Serious Damage in the Lumbering Districts and in Mills.

DUBUQUE, Iowa, April 19.—Dispatches here to-day from Menomonie, Wis., say that the rise in the Menomonee is unprecedented and that much damage has been done. The river is two feet above the highest previous water mark at Menomonie. Owing to the stability of the dam and mill more damage has been done above that point than elsewhere. The water is four feet deep in the big mill, and it will be two weeks before the mills can be put into running shape. At Cedar Falls, six miles above Menomonie, the dam and mills are badly damaged and logs in the dam all broke away. It will take five or six weeks to repair the damage there. At Prairie Farm, 40 miles above Menomonie, the water cuts its way around the dam, doing a great deal of damage to the mill and dam. Scott's dam on Lightning creek and Brown's dam on Hay river are both washed away. At Rice Lake, 30 miles above, the whole country is flooded and great damage has been done. The middle dam on Moose Ear is partially washed away. At Downsville, 12 miles below Menomonie, the dam is partly washed away and both the old and the new stores and boarding house have gone down the river. The devastation there is the greatest of any point on the river. The Chippewa River R. R. is badly damaged the whole length of it, and it is thought it will be two months before trains are running again. The flood seriously affects a large portion of the lumbering districts of Wisconsin.

ENGLAND.

LATE FROM LONDON.

LONDON, April 19.—The story about the blowing up of Salisbury Cathedral is a hoax.

The appointment of Pang Yuling as Chinese minister of war denotes that China is determined to resist French aggression in Annam.

The brig Marie, from Galveston for Queenstown, has been abandoned at sea. Crew saved.

ONE EXPERIENCE FROM MANY.

I have been sick and miserable so long and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense, no one seemed to know what ailed me, that I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a bottle of Hop Bitters and used them, unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gained so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural, but when I told them what had helped me, they said: "Hurrah for Hop Bitters! Long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy." —The Mother.

BABY'S PETITION.

Life's restless days are fleeting,
Children bloom, but die in teething;
Warning take, all friends and mothers
Watch the precious girls and brothers
Read the home life of Victoria,
Children nine, all had Castoria;
No sleepless nights, by baby squalling,
Like larks they rise in early morning.

HOP BITTERS ARE THE PUREST AND BEST BITTERS EVER MADE.

They are compounded from Hops, Malt, Buchu, Mandrake and Dandelion—the oldest, best, and most valuable medicines in the world, and contain all the best and most curative properties of all other remedies, being the greatest Blood Purifier, Liver Regulator, and Life and Health Restoring Agent on earth. No disease or ill health can possibly long exist where these bitters are used, so varied and perfect are their operations.

They give new life and vigor to the aged and infirm. To all whose employments cause irregularity of the bowels or urinary organs or who require an appetizer, tonic and mild stimulant, Hop Bitters are invaluable, being highly curative, tonic and stimulating, without intoxicating.

No matter what your feelings or symptoms are what the disease or ailment is, use Hop Bitters. Don't wait until you are sick, but if you only feel bad or miserable, use Hop Bitters at once. It may save your life. Hundreds have been saved by so doing. $500 will be paid for a case they will not cure or help.

Do not suffer or let your friends suffer, but use and urge them to use Hop Bitters.

Remember, Hop Bitters is no vile, drugged, drunken nostrum, but the Purest and Best Medicine ever made; the "Invalid's Friend and Hope," and no person or family should be without them. Try the Bitters to-day.
